Super senior citizens

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN

One source of very real pleasure for myself is getting to know the senior members of a congregation.

These folks, almost without exception, are absolutely remarkable. They are bright, cheerful and interested in life in Virginia Beach and the world.

One wonders why some people seem to live a very long time having a rich experience of living while others seem to fade away into a dark hole of depressing solitude.

Certainly there are minimum physical necessities. Albert Schweitzer at 90 was a strong man. His body was adequate to the demands he placed on it, but all of us are not so genetically blessed.

Apart from accident and terminal disease, living many years has a massive amount of evidence to support the position that longevity is regulated by our attitudes and beliefs. To find this out, I have often asked the nonagenarians the secrets of their long life. Without exception, their answers have been consistent.

One thing these vivacious oldsters have in common is an inner soul unchurched by hate and anger. People who hold grudges, who grouse about in search of revenge, who let old hurts rankle, are the ones who burn out at an early age.

The acid tongue is a very good index to a corrosive interior. Life is much to short to fight everything that comes along, and this kind of fighting only shows the deep insecurities in which so many people live out their lives.

Another factor which I have noticed is that these joyful oldsters are quick to forgive. They learned the lesson long ago that forgiveness is cleansing both for themselves and others. Released from the tensions, arguments and the acid of anger, these super seniors have found a calm rest for both their soul and body.

Another item which took me awhile to get into the focus is that they all have a fixed conviction about which their life is oriented and related. Successful long life depends on one's ability to put together experiences into understanding of what it all means. Without that integration, life is a series of unpredictable shocks, and perplexities and rude bewilderments.

As you might guess, the people I talked with were all deeply religious, and their worn Bibles showed care of their devotions. They take the daily news, the events both exciting and evil, and put them into a life view which is dominated with a sense of God's deep presence. Armed with this, nothing seems to them to be overwhelming.

They have seen it all before, and yet the world goes on Religious lecture series planned at VWC in memory of former area minister

An annual religious lecture series is being established at Virginia Wesleyan College in Virginia Beach in memory of a former Virginia United Methodist minister.

The Wesleyan Lecture Series, to begin in the fall of 1980, is being established in memory of Reverend Richard A. Bergdall by his widow, Mrs. Nellie S. Bergdall, and their two sons, James and George. Bergdall died in August, 1978 after serving more than 40 years in the Virginia Conference. Three of his last four pastoral assignments - Christ Church in Norfolk, Sedley-Schell in Southampton County and minister of visitation at Haygood in Virginia Beach - were in the Tidewater area. Earlier in his ministry he had served pastorates at Campostella in Norfolk (now Saint Paul's in Virginia Beach) and Phoebe in Hampton. He also served pastorates in McLean, Sterling, Covington, Martinsville, Kenbridge, Strasburg, Appomattox, Bassett and Roanoke. Bergdall was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Randolph-Macon College in the class of 1928 and received his divinity degree from the Candler School of Theology at Emory University.

During the last year of his life, Bergdall, at the age of 75, took a refresher course in Greek at Virginia Wesleyan. He was a frequent visitor at convocations and other events and often in classes and faculty offices at Virginia Wesleyan after his retirement in Virginia Beach in 1973.

In announcing the establishment of this series, President Lambuth M. Clarke said, "We are honored to have the name of the Reverend Richard A. Bergdall associated with Virginia Wesleyan College in this significant and helpful way. Throughout his productive ministry in the United Methodist Church, he had a love for young people and a great interest in our denomination's colleges. During the last years of his life, Bergdall was frequently on our campus, and his presence here was a source of satisfaction and pleasure to all of us, students and faculty, who were privileged to know him. The annual Wesleyan Lectures, established in his memory by his wife and sons, will benefit our college community and the ministers of this area for years to come."

The inaugural speaker for the religious series will be announced in the spring.

Historic Old Donation Church hosts annual oyster roast

Historic Old Donation Church located on Witchduck Road near Independence Blvd. in Virginia Beach, will once again host its annual Oyster Roast and Bazaar on November 17, the Saturday before Thanksgiving.

The 46th observance will feature, as always, the sale of a wide variety of hand crafted articles, toys, books, dried flowers, jams and pickles. For the children there will be pony rides and games. A magician will be on hand giving performances throughout the day. There will also be church tours.

Luncheon served on the grounds and indoors, including Brunswick stew, Smithfield ham, and oysters on the half-shell or roasted over an open fire. Dining room will be open 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Outside Oyster Bar will be open 11 a.m. on.

and with it the providence and patience of God. Their security and their serenity, even in the face of their own infirmities, is profound, but it is based on a rock that they know will not be moved.

One more characteristic these convivial oldsters have is that they never cease the input into their brains. They read, they watch, they discuss and they are interested in what is going on. In short, they have lively minds.

Of course, we have all met people with dead minds at the age of 40, or those who mostly live in the past. These are people who are dead between their ears, and their bodies just go through the motions of life.

Someone with an alert mind growing older with success, and this calls for learning how to use newly found time and leisure wisely. In many cases, these 90-year-old members are the most interesting people of all because their incredible recall adds a perception on current events which no one else has.

I spent several hours with Dr. Roland Bainton when he was 86 and professor emeritus from Yale University. At that time he lectured in six languages, knew 12, and was studying Polish.

These people are the super senior citizens and they are terrific. They can teach each and every one of us about the living out of our lives. The next time you meet someone who is way up there in age, take the time to ask him the reason for his long life. I daresay you will hear from most of them the sure words of the stabilizing and calming influence of a strong faith.

Townhouse - apartment complex proposed for Rose Hall

A local partnership submitted the only proposal for the development of a 13-acre site in the Rose Hall complex into a townhouse-apartment project with a $306,000 bid, the city's asking price for the property.

Rose Hall Associates, a general partnership consisting of Frederick Napolitano, Richard Olivieri, Donald Dressin and Bob Andrews, all of Virginia Beach, unveiled its proposal at Monday afternoon's council meeting.

The acreage, which has been reserved for multifamily development, adjoins the property of the City Manager George L. Hanbury said that the Rose Hall complex, off Virginia Beach Boulevard, has the great potential for being one of the finest sites in all of Virginia.

Plans for the multifamily area were prepared by Melvin Spotts, architect; Edward G. Carson, landscape architect; and Mark and Basler, engineers.

The proposal calls for 150 townhouse and apartment units for 11.74 units per acre in a Williamsburg - Colonial design. Some of the N.C. family offers thanks to Beach couple who helped in a time of crisis

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

The way times are now, everyone knows it is dangerous to stop and offer help to someone on the highway. In fact, I have often wondered what I would do if the situation ever arose. But thank God for the wonderful couple traveling in a motor home near Emporia, Va. on Oct. 13th, who stopped and helped a young woman. We do not know their name, only that they live in Virginia Beach; but they can be assured we will be forever grateful to them.

This young woman, on a foggy and rainy afternoon, ran off the shoulder of the road; instinctively cut back onto the wet pavement; flat-tailed; went down an embankment and hit a telephone pole. Evidently no one saw the car leave the road. Bleeding from cuts and a broken nose and needless to say, very frightened, she found the way back to the highway.

Several cars passed her by, and we still shudder to think of what could have happened if the wrong person had stopped on the pretense of helping. But this compassionate couple did stop, tended to her immediate needs, carried her to the hospital in Emporia and called her husband.

We will probably never know who they were, but we thank them from the bottom of our hearts for all they did.

From a very grateful husband, father, mother and sister in Durham, N.C.

McIntyre, Hunter wed

The marriage of Miss Debra Jean McIntyre and Charles Bryan Hunter Jr., formerly of Virginia Beach, took place November 3, at 6:30 in the evening at the Front Royal Presbyterian Church in Front Royal. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Benjamin Rice Lacy III, of Front Royal, and the late Judge George Lee McIntyre, of Bristol, Tennessee. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Oscar L. Boyd and the Late Mr. Boyd, Norfolk, and the late Dr. and Mrs. John T. McIntyre of Bristol, Tennessee.

The groom is the son of Admiral and Mrs. Charles Bryan Hunter, of Oak Harbor, Washington.

The Reverend Richard Bethune, pastor, performed the ceremony. Organist was Mrs. Richard Bethune, accompanied by trumpeters Kem Shook and John Coulter.

Ushers were Charles E. Horton, Jr., Norfolk; Corbin Johnson, Virginia Beach; George Lee McIntyre Jr., brother of the bride, Front Royal; Ensign Mark Strasser and Ensign Robertson Hanchek Jr., of Virginia Beach.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside in Pensacola, Fla.

Given in marriage by her stepfather, Benjamin Rice Lacy III, she had as her maid of honor Miss Elizabeth Boyd McIntyre, of Front Royal, her sister.

The groom selected his brother, Lt. Timothy Lewis Hunter of Quantico, Va. as best man.

Bridesmaids were Misses Mary Beth Boyd, Susan Leigh Boyd, cousins of the bride; Miss Terri Manfretti, all of Virginia Beach; Donna Ours, Falls Church; and Karen Anaya, Richmond.

Herr oath given by her husband

Melanie Hilliard Herr of Virginia Beach was recently sworn into the Navy as a lieutenant (junior grade) by her husband, LCDR M.F. "Fritz" Herr of Fleet Composite Squadron Two (VC-2) in ceremonies at Naval Air Station Oceana.

Lieutenant (junior grade) Herr comes from a family having a long and varied military background. Both her father and mother have served in the Navy; one brother is still on active duty in the Navy and one brother was a Marine. She had three years prior service as a Navy nurse in the U.S. Naval Hospital Oak Knoll in Oakland, California. Is it any wonder that after seven years absence, Melanie Herr decided to return to active Naval service?

An A-4 Skyhawk pilot and VC-2 Operations Officer, LCDR Herr officiated the ceremony in the squadron ready room. Assignment for LTJG Herr is the Naval Regional Medical Center in Portsmouth.

Francis Land house restored, rededicated by city

The City of Virginia Beach held a rededication ceremony for the restored Francis Land House, formerly the Rose Hall Dress Shop, at its Virginia Beach Boulevard site last Sunday, Nov. 4.

The city has renovated and restored the house, which was built by the Land family in 1732, and holds title to it and the surrounding 35 acres. From 1954 to 1973, when the property was purchased by the city, the house was used as the Rose Hall Dress Shop.

The house, located near the intersection of Virginia Beach Boulevard and King's Grant Road, is now registered with the Virginia Landmarks Commission.

'Lite-A-Bike' program increases bicycle visibility

Reflective tape will be applied in a "Lite-A-Bike" program to be conducted here by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post 392 and its Ladies Auxiliary.

Tape will be applied to bicycles at the Murphy Mart Parking Lot, Independence Blvd., on November 17 from 1 to 5 p.m. Strips of reflective tape will be put on the rear fender or high-rise bar, handlebars, frame front and rear of the wheels of the bicycles, making each bike more visible after dark from all angles.

The highly reflective tape — the same type material used in reflective traffic signs and license plates — is visible in the headlights of an automobile. The program places great emphasis on outlining the shape of the bicycle at night. Drivers will no longer have to guess what shape of reflected light mean. The shape of the bicycle at night will closely resemble its shape in daylight.

"Youngsters shouldn't be out bike riding after dark, but if they are, their bikes should have reflective tape," said Post Commander Humphrey, coordinator of the Lite-A-Bike program.

Commander Humphrey pointed out that some 800 persons are killed each year in bike accidents, 62 percent of them children under 14. Another 28,000 persons are injured each year in such accidents. Four out of five fatal bike accidents occur after dark.

"The extra warning provided by reflective tape can help save a child's life," the V.F.W. official said.

Linkhorn Park Garden Club plans winter activities

The Linkhorn Park Garden Club met Friday, November 2, at the Princess Anne Country Club. Wayne Jones was the guest speaker. With the holiday season approaching, he chose "Party Ideas" as the program theme.

Plans were discussed by the club for its annual Christmas Tea Flower Show. This year the tea will be held on Friday, December 14 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the home of Senator and Mrs. A. Joseph Canada Jr., 928 Holliday Point, Linkhorn Park. The judges will be Mrs. Arthur Gallagher and Mrs. R. D. Umaja.

The Club's HANDS Project this year will be a garden therapy project with the students at the Center for Effective Learning, 233 N. Witchduck Road, Virginia Beach. The club has prepared a large flower bed on the grounds of the school, and has purchased 330 yellow daffodil bulbs to be planted by the children. Each child will plant a bulb in the fall and be able to see it grow and bloom in the spring. This purpose of the project is not only to beautify the school grounds, but also to promote the child's interest in gardening, and provide a sense of accomplishment and self-confidence for the handicapped child. The day of Nov. 15 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. was designated as Bulb Planting Day by the club.

Representation for social security appeals

By HARVEY RIDINGER

Field Representative, Social Security Administration, Virginia Beach Area

People who appeal the decision on their social security supplemental security income, or Medicare claims should remember that they have the right to be represented by a person of their choice.

The right to representation applies whenever you have any business with social security, but people are more apt to choose to be represented when appealing a decision. A representative may be an attorney or anyone else whose judgment and experience you trust.

There are four stages of appeal possible for social security or SSI decisions: a "reconsideration" of your case by persons other than those who made the original decision; a hearing before an administrative law judge of the office of hearings and appeals; a review by the Appeals Council; and, finally a civil action in Federal Court.

Different rules apply to appeals of Medicare hospital insurance and Medicare medical insurance decisions. You should call your nearest social security office for the special leaflets available if you need more information.

Your representative may act for you on most social security matters, including requesting a reconsideration, a hearing, or an Appeals Council review on your behalf. Generally he or she will not be permitted to sign your application for benefits, however.

A copy of any decision made in your case will be sent to you and your representative. Any notice or request sent to your representative has the same effect as if sent to you.

You should be especially mindful of the time limits involved in the appeals process. They must be carefully observed at each stage. You should discuss these time limits with your representative once you decide to appeal to be sure you both are aware of them.

Your appointment of a representative must be in writing and his or her acceptance must be in writing. Ask for a special form for this purpose at your social security office.

The Norfolk Social Security Office is located in the Federal Building, Room 600, 200 Granby Mall, Norfolk, Virginia, 23510. The phone number is 441-3401 and the hours are from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Beach children's artwork on display at UVB offices

Perhaps no one sees the world more clearly - and with a fresher eye - than child. You can see how children from the Virginia Beach area view the world around them through November 23, at United Virginia Bank/Seaboard Nation, Pembroke Office, Virginia Beach Boulevard; Hilltop Office, First Colonial Road & Laskin Road; and Pacific Avenue Office, 34th & Pacific Avenue, Virginia Beach.

Seven pieces of artwork created by local children are on display at the Pembroke Office; five pieces at the Hilltop Office and eight pieces at the Pacific Avenue Office after being shown at the State Fair of Virginia. The pictures, which include paintings, drawings, prints, and photographs, were created by children 5-12 and submitted to the International Year of the Child children's art contest organized by the Virginia Division for Children. The local pieces were among more than 600 created by Virginia children to fit the theme, "Children and the World Around Them."

In addition to the pictures being displayed here, other UVB affiliates throughout the state are mounting exhibits of artwork from their areas that were part of the International Year of the Child contest. Some 317 works were especially prepared by United Virginia for display and will be returned to the Virginia Division for Children following display at UVB offices.

The International Year of the Child, which continues through the end of 1979, was declared by the United Nations to focus world attention on the quality of life

'South Pacific' held over at Tidewater Dinner Theatre

Rodgers and Hammerstein's musical masterpiece "South Pacific," now in its seventh week at the Tidewater Dinner Theatre at Lake Wright, has been extended to ten weeks through November 18, making it the longest running show ever to be produced at this theatre in its seven year history.

"After seven years, we don't expect to set a lot of new records," said Maureen Sader, who with her husband Alan opened the dinner theatre in late 1972. "We knew a travelling company had played Chrysler Hall last summer, and we never expected it to be a record-breaker."

The Tidewater Dinner Theatre's recent production of "Fiddler on the Roof" held the previous record of nine and one half weeks, with "Hello Dolly" at nine weeks, and "Purlie" holding other records for attendance in shorter engagements. Other shows by the Rodgers and Hammerstein duo, including "The King And I," "Oklahoma" and "Carousel" which have been staged previously at the T.D.T. all rank in the top ten of the more than fifty productions offered since the '72 opening. Due to the overwhelming success of "South Pacific," both "Oklahoma" and "The King And I" are under consideration for production in 1980.

Prior to his association with Oscar Hammerstein, Richard Rodgers had teamed with Lorenz Hart for a number of hit Broadway Musicals. The Tidewater Dinner Theatre will produce "Babes In Arms" by the pair in the spring.

Kicking off 1980 at the T.D.T. will be a musical revival recently from Broadway entitled "Rodgers and Hart, A Musical Celebration" incorporating about four dozen of their greatest hits; songs like "My Funny Valentine," "Bewitched," "The Lady Is a Tramp" and "With a Song In My Heart." Other shows under consideration for the year that starts a new decade are "Sleuth" and "Tribute."

Following "South Pacific" will be a comedy chosen especially for the holiday season, "My Three Angels" which will play from November 20 through the T.D.T.'s New Year's Eve party. Call the theatre at 461-7026 for ticket information.

Post Office will operate a station and provide a show cancellation.

Homeowner is bugged by termites

By GENE GARY

Q. I had my house in Lynnhaven inspected by a pest control company which found termites in one place only under the kitchen sink.

The evidence was plain but the thing that I did not like was the company's recommendation to blanket the ground under the house with aldrin. I know two families who feel that this treatment made them ill.

What is your reaction?

A. There are other products you can use. Dieldrin or heptachlor can be applied in a concentration of one-half percent, or liquid chlordane can be used in a 1 percent solution.

When applied, the ground could then be covered with heavy plastic. However, use of these chemicals by other than licensed professional control operators is not recommended.

I would advise that you consult another exterminating company if you are not satisfied with the re-

Here's how

If there is such a method, I suggest you consult with a landscape gardener or a dealer in crushed rock and brick. They can give you detailed information on the conventional rock gardening practices and may have some newly developed methods.

Recommendations of the first company.

Q. Two years ago I moved to this area and bought a house which I must maintain.

I have to paint the inside now, and the ceilings are a problem. It seems the ceilings have a sprayed on paint, more like the old calcimine used years ago, and when brushing on new paint or using a thick roller, the old ceiling surface, which is of rough texture, comes off, leaving bare plaster-board. It looks terrible.

Could you please advise me how to overcome this problem and apply a coat of paint without disturbing the paint that is now on the ceiling?

G.J.C.

A. From your description, I would assume you have a sprayed-on acoustic type ceiling.

The only method of painting this surface without disturbing the present finish is to spray on the new coat. This involves covering all floors, furniture, etc.

Q. We have a room panelled with wormy cypris. Is there a way to use the sanding dust, mixed with something to make a filler for the nail holes?

We tried a plastic wood dough, but the matching isn't too good.

R.M.

A. Mix the powder with spar varnish to make a paste.

Or some wood-finishing supply dealers now have a putty stick which comes in wood colors. This is for the purpose of filling nail holes and small cracks.

A. The type of landscaping you describe is known as rock gardening, but I am not familiar with the use of any adhesive to hold the gravel together.

You and your money

Q. What is the difference between a second mortgage and a second deed of trust?

L.B.

A. A second mortgage is a form of security which is used to finance part of a piece of property that is not covered by the first mortgage and the down payment. Home owners can obtain a second mortgage only after the first mortgage has been settled.

Second deed trusts are not only used to reduce the down payment on a home, but also can be used to consolidate loans, or to provide investment capital to start a business, or finance another investment.

I felt your article was unbalanced because there were no warnings about how an investor could lose. They can, can't they?

A. Yes, they can, and my apologies if the article indicated otherwise.

The most common way an investor can lose is by purchasing a second mortgage or trust deed which has been poorly written. What is meant by this is that in the event of a foreclosure, and the house is sold, there isn't enough money for the investor to recoup his investment after the house is sold, the first mortgage and the real estate broker's fees are paid off.

One of the best ways to eliminate this problem, however, is to deal with only reputable brokers, and especially those who are conservative by nature.

You should make certain that the mortgage broker is lending no more than 50 percent of the equity value available.

That is the market price of the house less the balance due on the first mortgage.

Also when you are buying a second, you should keep in mind that even when interest rate are going up as they have been, whatever interest rate the borrower is paying you, will be what you receive for the balance of the loan payoff.

The last caveat offered before you decide to invest in seconds is that if you cannot financially exist without a mortgage payment being paid on time, or you are uneasy about property being foreclosed, you would be much wiser to invest your money in an area where you know you will receive your monthly return on time.

Q. My wife and I are buying a home in Bayside which is being sold by the owner. We were told we could use a G.I. loan, but I haven't the slightest idea where to get forms, etc. Can you help me?

C.H.

A. The institution where you are going to obtain your loan should have all the necessary papers, and will also assist you in completing them properly.

If you are going to obtain a loan directly from the VA's Administration, then you should contact the VA in Norfolk.

Nov. recycling pickups announced

Citizens of Virginia Beach can receive 23 cents a pound from the Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company for their clean household aluminum and all-aluminum beverage cans.

E. J. Kelly Jr., district recycling manager for Reynolds, said, "All kinds of people are reaping the benefits of recycling aluminum. Area school and church groups have learned that recycling is an excellent fundraising project that helps to improve the environment."

Recyclable aluminum consists of all-aluminum beverage cans and clean household items, such as foil, frozen food and dinner trays, pie plates, and dip, pudding and meat containers. Other items including aluminum siding, gutters, storm door and window frames, and lawn furniture tubing are also worth 23 cents per pound if properly prepared. This aluminum must be free of all foreign materials, cut to lengths not exceeding three feet and should not be mixed with aluminum cans. Aluminum castings are also recyclable.

During the month of November, the Virginia Beach public will receive 23 cents a pound for their recyclable aluminum at:

Civic Center (Dome), 19th & Pacific Ave., second and fourth Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Recycling Service Center, 1435 Air Rail Ave., Tuesday thru Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

There's still an opportunity for the little guy

By RAYMOND P.
KUTTENKULER

SBA District Director

Over the past couple of years, I have had several ideas about how to improve some products and services that seem to be available only through giant corporations or their subsidiaries. Everything seems to be dominated by the big companies. Is there still an opportunity for a "little guy" like me to go into business with just an idea and a few bucks?

We tried a plastic wood dough, but the matching isn't too good.

R.M.

A. Mix the powder with spar varnish to make a paste.

Or some wood-finishing supply dealers now have a putty stick which comes in wood colors. This is for the purpose of filling nail holes and small cracks.

Questions on building, home maintenance and repair may be sent to Here's how, in care of the Virginia Beach Sun.

You bet there is! It won't be easy, and the competition's tough, but there's still ample opportunity in our economic system for someone who's got an idea and who's willing to work to succeed with his or her own enterprise.

Infact, the idea that big corporations dominate American business is not totally accurate. Their influence may be more visible, but the underlying strength of the American economy is small business—even today.

Of the 10.7 million non-farm businesses in this country, nearly 97 percent are considered "small" by U.S. government standards. Yet they account for 43 percent of the gross national product, 58 percent of total U.S. business employment, and they directly or indirectly provide the livelihood of more than 100 million Americans.

Significantly, between 1969 and 1976, small businesses provided two-thirds of all the new jobs created in America. Government accounted for the other third. The nation's 1,000 largest corporations, during the same period, created less than one-tenth of one percent of the new jobs!

The risks for small businesses are high, though. More than half go bankrupt within their first five years, and all but a fraction of those failures are due to poor management.

New businesses are faced with inflation, taxation, regulation, and competition, so the decision to strike out with a new enterprise is not to be taken lightly.

Despite the perils, however, about 250,000 people start new businesses every year.

And the nation is better for that effort. Not only is small business our greatest source of new jobs, but small business accounts for a tremendous share of innovation and new technology.

For example, did you know that the helicopter was developed by a small business? So were the ball point pen, the automatic transmission, the instant camera, frozen foods, high-fidelity recordings, wash and dry clothing, the first jet engine, the mini-computer.

Small business innovators are constantly developing new ideas and products, and many of these efforts will result in the success stories of tomorrow.

So don't be discouraged. The opportunities are great for people willing to take risks, to work hard, to put their total effort behind something they think is worthwhile and which may give lifelong satisfaction and reward.

But be realistic, too. Don't expect overnight success. Be prepared for failure. And know where you want to go before you take the first step.

Guidelines for selecting a day care center

Finding safe, pleasant day care centers that will contribute to preschoolers' education is a problem facing many working parents. Parents looking for such facilities, says the Better Business Bureau, should put together a checklist of specific requirements, then visit the day care centers to inspect the facilities and talk with the staffs.

With increasing numbers of women entering the work force, the supply of day care facilities sometimes doesn't satisfy the demand. Parents should start their shopping early, before children reach the age of three (the acceptable entry age at most centers) to help ensure their child a place in the center of their choice.

Is the center licensed?

Most states require licenses for both day care centers and family day care homes, public and private.

Licensing requirements vary from state to state but usually include an inspection for minimum state health and safety requirements.

Parents can ask if the centers they are considering meet the latest federal guidelines.

For help in finding reputable day care centers, call departments of social services, child welfare offices, schools, the YMCA and YWCA, or

Is the staff responsible and knowledgeable? Are they professionally trained? What is the attitude toward discipline and supervision?

'Pup tent' made of sheets gets this delightfully decorated youngster's room off to an appealing start. Whimsical wallpaper by Comark and rust carpeting of Anso nylon by Monticello add color to room designed with budget in mind.

Decorating drama on a budget

By BARBARA HARTUNG

Q. We've just moved into a home near Indian River that needs some fixing up — in fact, there are heavy financial demands in each room. I believe we will have a very small budget when it comes to decorating our bedrooms but I want them to be attractive.

I am most concerned about how to decorate my son's room. He's 6 and has a rather spacious room but no furniture except a bed and two old chests at the present time. —R.N.

A. You might start with an inexpensive wallpaper to add drama and decorating inspiration to the room and establish a color scheme. Or if you'd prefer, give the walls a couple of coats of a neutral off-white and try your hand at painting a mural or some of his favorite figures.

Choose a warm but medium to deep tone for his carpeting — rust is an especially functional and pleasant shade.

Add some drama to his bed by the impressive use of fabric. Tent the headboard of his bed with two contrasting solid colors of fabric (sheeting is often economical for this use) and staple corners at the top of the bed and sides as well.

Add an inexpensive split bamboo shade at the window.

Paint your old chest colors from your wallpaper or whatever color scheme you choose. Other inexpensive but very useful furnishings are a practical army cot window seat that can double for an overnight friend, and a director's chair, both in bright-colored canvas.

Q. Our condominium has a small living room. I'm going to wallpaper the walls in a lovely golden green and white floral print which also has a matching linen and a sheer available.

What should I choose for the sofa, draperies and carpeting to make the room seem as large as possible and yet have an inviting atmosphere? —N.W.

A. I've seen small rooms given great decorative quality when the same print is used throughout to give the room unity.

Do you know where I might find patterns or ideas for modern, do-it-yourself furniture making? —Y.B.

A. Check in your local library for a copy of "Bright Ideas for Your Home" by Per Dalsgaard and Elisabeth Erichsen (published by Harper and Row, $14.95). The 170-page volume is filled with great modern ideas with tremendous decorating power.

There are quilted bedsprads and a matching floor mat, curtain-enclosed four-poster beds, deck chairs that qualify as works of art and dozens of foam-filled chairs, sofas and lounging furniture.

The directions for making the items as well as specific information about the materials needed for the projects are included. This is a grand book for the young and the young at heart.

New homeowners tell HOW about complaints

By LIN J. COOPER

Director of Communications, Tidewater Builders Association

"Did you have any problems in your new house?"
Yes. Yes. Yes is the answer. Fully 90 percent of new home owners report that they find some problems with their new homes, and this holds true regardless of the selling price of the house.

Considering that the typical new house is made up of almost 40,000 pieces of material, it's not hard to understand why the numbers are high. The survey, conducted by the Home Owners Warranty Corporation, involved 2000 buyers of new homes purchased between July 1978 and June 1979.

What are the problems new homeowners most often face? Of the 12 problem areas homeowners were concerned with, four by far caused the greatest number of complaints. These were doors and windows; floors, wall and ceiling complaints; plumbing; and grading of the lot. The local Tidewater HOW Council reports that complaints leading the list in Virginia Beach in the last few months are window and door leakage and dissatisfaction with lot grading.

Not surprising is the fact that the overwhelming majority of new home buyers contact their builders promptly when there is a problem in their new home. In the survey conducted by HOW, 30 percent of the respondents said that their builder answered their complaint within one month. Interestingly, the highest incidence of quick response was reported by buyers of the least expensive houses. This is probably because the less expensive units are built by high volume builders who already have a complaint answering mechanism built into their operation.

Unfortunately it is still true that a number of builders do not answer complaints, and homeowners are often left with no recourse but to contact their attorneys or governmental agencies. This is where HOW can play such an important role in that its dispute settling procedure has such high builder support. A buyer must buy a HOW warrantied home or course.

It appears that in Virginia Beach, 90 percent of the new homes being built in 1979 will be carrying the HOW warranty. The local HOW Council reports that more than 3000 units will be enrolled this year, making this the best year for market penetration since the program began in Tidewater in 1974.

Under the HOW program, the builder warrants the house against delineated defects in the first year. He warrants the performance of the mechanical systems in the second year; in the years three through 10 a national insurer warrants the house against major structural defects. The program protects the homeowner even in cases of builder default since the national insurer acts as a backup to the individual builder. It offers a conciliation and arbitration process as a substitute for costly legal action when builder and buyer can't agree.

The local HOW Council urges homeowners to communicate with their builder, in writing, and allow the builder 30 days before contacting HOW. HOW also urges the prospective home buyer to ask if a HOW warranty comes on the home he's considering. He can also receive, by calling the HOW office at 461-9140, a complete list of registered Tidewater area builders.

Should one wish to request a conciliation, or dispute settlement, the person to speak with at the local HOW office is Ms. Gina Smigiel.

Ways to add an Oriental flair

By LESLIE AYERS

The Oriental look is coming back and in a big way.

Whether you prefer casual Oriental with leather and brass trimming or the more formal Oriental, the selections available in upholstered and occasional furniture pieces and accessories are abundant.

By its nature, the Oriental style is a design bridge that adds a special flavor to traditional, transitional and contemporary decorating.

If you are ready to make some changes in your apartment why not consider a decorating scheme that includes the Oriental look? Should you be looking for a sofa that has the Oriental flair, but your living room is traditional, consider a tuxedo style sofa with tufted inside back and arms and a classic Oriental upholstered base.

With a sofa style like this, you can use your wing chairs, brass and glass coffee tables in a compatible design.

Add an Oriental chest or cabinet unit in a lacquer or crackle finish that relates to a color in your upholstery or drapery material.

The brass and hardware hinges will tie in with your brass and glass table, and the lacquer color on the chest will give an added zing to your fabric colors.

What is your nutrition IQ?

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY

Registered Dietitian

How aware are you of your own nutrition? Do you eat to live or live to eat? Do you have any real knowledge about the foods that go into your body or don't you care, as long as you're not hungry?

American food consumers have been the target of nutritional quackery for so many years that the misconceptions often are better known than the facts. One reason for the prevalence of public quackery is that factual nutrition education is not provided sufficiently in the school system. Kids may get their own knowledge of food and what it does for them, from television commercials, aimed at selling products.

Taking care of one's body properly to promote the ultimate levels of energy and well-being should be as much a part of a young child's education as learning to read and write. Why haven't we permitted such folly? We need strong, health-minded, well-informed Americans.

It is important that they understand basic nutrition facts, and not fadism. To help clarify some current misinformation, the following may help you improve your nutrition:

Fiction:
1. "Natural" vitamins are superior to "synthetic" vitamins, so you must pay more for them.

Fact:
A vitamin is always exactly the same in chemical structure and properties, or it would not be that vitamin. The best sources of vitamins are foods, not pills, because you receive additional nutrients from foods that are not in pills.

Fiction:
2. Protein is a good supplement to add to your diet. Carbohydrates are bad, and should be avoided. Just eat a lot of protein and you will be strong.

Fact:

False. You DO NOT need extra protein supplements. Simply eat meat, fish, fowl, eggs and dairy products. EXCESSIVE protein can be dangerous, especially to kidneys. You need some carbohydrates daily especially from fruits, vegetables and cereal grains, or you can suffer severe potassium losses.

Fiction:
3. Huge quantities of vitamin C will keep you from catching colds. You need rose hips for vitamin C.

Fact:
False. About 20 per cent of the population seem to get some cold symptom relief from some extra vitamin C. Some people have developed kidney stones from excessive amounts, and diabetic urine tests may be distorted. "Rose hips" for vitamin C are unnecessary and expensive. Use citrus fruits instead.

Fiction:
4. Fasting cleanses your system and is good for everyone.

Fact:
False. Fasting doesn't "cleanse" anything. It is an outmoded, meaningless term. Some people like to fast and if the water intake is sufficient, it can be done for a limited time. Others suffer severe headache, dizziness, drop in blood sugar, cold perspiration and other unpleasant side effects, and should never fast.

Fiction:
5. Taking excessive vitamins beyond Recommended Daily Allowances (RDA), gives you more energy and pep.

Fact:
If you get all the RDA, you certainly don't need excessive amounts of any vitamins or minerals. Only minute amounts are required for specific functions - and overdoses can do great harm, especially vitamins A and D, which can be lethal.

Spend your money on powerhouse foods such as whole grain cereals, milk and milk products, vegetables and fruit, meat, fish and fowl - and you won't need expensive additions.

Persistent pain

It may be caused by loneliness

By PAULA KRINER

Although the elderly Beach woman's injured hip healed long ago, the pain persists and some doctors believe that loneliness is the cause.

"Between 20 and 80 percent of a doctor's caseload is made up of lonely people," claims Dr. John Loeser, associate professor of neurosurgery at the University of Washington.

Loeser is one of many of the nation's leading authorities on pain research.

Physicians, Loeser said, are taught to look at pain in physiological terms. "Their concept of pain is often incorrect. We must learn to listen to what the patient has to say," he said.

"If a doctor pushed the patient away abruptly — by renewing a prescription for medication, for instance — then he is only aggravating the problem," Loeser added.

"If the pain problem starts for one set of reasons, then it may continue for another," he said. "We can alleviate acute pain. In contrast, we have not nearly as well been able to deal with chronic pain which can persist long after the injury has healed."

The probability that a chronic pain problem is wrapped up with the environment is so high that doctors must look at outside factors, he said.

"Who you are, what you are and how you respond to your environment influence how you respond to pain."

Durges and relaxation treatments that reduce tissue damage, can lead to depression in the chronic-pain patient, according to Loeser.

"No one remedy works for everyone. The first thing, though, is to decrease narcotics and increase activity, then take a look at psychological factors that could be influencing the patient and tailor a program to meet his needs."

Several methods considered effective in the treatment of chronic pain are considered.

Electrical nerve stimulation, a controlled method of giving stimulation to the skin, helps relieve the pain for some.

"It doesn't make anybody worse, you can't get addicted and it's not expensive," Loeser said. "The patient can apply it himself to the area he is receiving pain and need not make continuous visits to the doctor."

Biofeedback is another alternative to medication. When muscle spasms are part of the pain symptoms, biofeedback therapy can help relax muscle tension. Acupuncture and hypnosis also are considered effective in some cases.

What to look for in a vision exam for children

Most school eye tests in Virginia Beach will not tell you everything about how well your child is seeing, says the president of the Virginia Optometric Association.

Dr. George Gillespie of Bedford, Virginia, stressed the school eye chart gives only a superficial screening of a child's ability to see at a distance and checks none of the many other vision skills, including the ability to see the printed page, children need for learning.

By comparison, a thorough vision examination, taking from 30 to 60 minutes on a first visit, covers:

1. Taking of the child's health and development history, including facts of the child's birth (premature, etc.), details of when the child first sat up alone, crawled, etc., and information about the child's behavior.

2. An exterior and interior eye health examination.

3. Tests of ability to see sharply and clearly at near and far distances.

To jog or not to jog

By WILLIAM J. GOLDWAG, M.D.

Q. I am 47 years old, live at the Beach and am in generally good health except for being a little overweight.

I had a complete checkup from my doctor and on his advice and others, decided to go on an exercise program. I would like to start jogging but recently I have read some medical reports that say that jogging can do more harm than good.

Frankly, I don't know what to do. Do you have any advice on the subject?

A. Your question reminds me of one of Ashleigh Brilliant's "Pot Shots," "I desperately need some wise advice — which will recommend that I do what I want to do." Many people will go to one doctor after another until they find one whose advice matches up with their deeper desires.

Yes, there can be harm from jogging — and from walking — and from sitting — and even from lying in bed. There can also be a lot of benefits from each of these activities if the time, place and circumstances are appropriate.

I jog and sometimes I have gotten strained muscles and a blister or two. They don't feel so good and I am sure that among the millions who have jogged, someone here and there has suffered some major injury or attack of some kind.

The funny thing about jogging is that it's not only good exercise and can be of benefit for cardiovascular conditioning, but also there are other side benefits that occur indirectly.

Most joggers begin to take some interest in what they are eating and how nutritious their diet may or may not be. Their weight becomes of some importance since it has to be dragged along for one or more miles.

Some people discover that they have forgotten how to breathe along with their previously sedentary lifestyle. Some find that they walk with a bit more zest, they are inclined to stand somewhat straighter and there's a hint of self-confidence that wasn't there.

If you asked me, "Does all that come from jogging?" I would answer, "No, but it often seems to accompany it."

Inevitably, there has developed a National Jogging Day which was cultivated on Oct. 13. My suggestion is to try jogging and see how you like it. If you don't like it, don't do it — there are lots of other forms of exercise

Ask the doctor

Q. Would it be possible for you to describe skin cancer? I have a friend who had a very dark mole which was very inflamed all around it. Somehow the mole got rubbed off in showering and the red irritation has spread to a fairly good size. It looks very red, rough and scaly.

She lets the sun get on it hoping that it will heal.

A. You can't be sure of skin cancer from just a description. In fact, often even the doctor examining it can't be sure without taking a biopsy and having it examined under the microscope.

One frequent finding, though, is that the sore doesn't heal up in a week or two the way most other sores will. That alone doesn't make it certain to be cancer, but isn't suspicious enough to warrant going to the doctor with it.

When a mole or pigmented spot becomes cancerous, it is apt to be the kind that spreads to other parts of the body readily. This is called melanoma and although it can be treated successfully, you can't afford to wait around for it to heal by itself. You need to treat it right away.

Skin cancer generally is curable in the large majority of cases because you can see it developing and it can be removed before it grows too large or spreads, but that's no reason to sit and watch it grow.

Since so many skin lesions, including cancer are associated with many years' exposure to the sun, it isn't wise to try and get it to heal by exposing it to more sun. If it is cancer, the sun will aggravate it and if it isn't, it will just as likely heal without the sun exposure.

TCC receives HEA grant

Tidewater Community College has received $122,060 in grant money for its Cooperative Education Program.

The award, made under the authority of the Higher Education Act (HEA), Title VIII, is the largest grant HEA made to any institution in the state for 1979-80. It is more than twice as large as the next highest grant of $48,450 which was awarded by HEA to Northern Virginia Community College, Annadale.

The money is to go toward administration of Tidewater's Cooperative Education Program. The program is designed to allow students to receive college credits while working in supervised, paid learning positions with participating employers. Students work such curriculum-related jobs as drafting, data processing, secretarial positions and business management programs.

The grant is the fourth the college has received in a five-year cycle of HEA grants. During the first year, 70 students participated in the program. Last year, there were 648 students in the program. The goal for this year is 700-750 students.

Sam Lamb, coordinator of the Cooperative Education Program on the Virginia Beach campus, wrote the grant. Constance Brothers, program coordinator of the Chesapeake campus, is director of the grant.

Beach parent included on Longwood advisory council

Longwood College has announced the appointment of Robert P. Stenzhorn of Virginia Beach to the college's Parents Advisory Council for the current academic year.

The Parents Advisory Council was established in 1977 at Longwood to provide another avenue for communication between parents and the college. The overall purpose of the council is to promote a better understanding among parents of the goals and policies of the college, as well as the benefits of a general purpose education.

The membership of the council, appointed by Longwood president, Dr. Henry J. Willett Jr., includes parents representing each of the four classes. Stenzhorn's son, William, is a freshman at the college.

This year's first meeting of the Parent Advisory Council with President Willett and other college officials was held Saturday, October 27 during Oktoberfest, Longwood's annual homecoming and parents weekend.

Virginia Beach students receive ODU scholarships

Virginia Beach natives Dorcas A. Asercion, David E. Casher, and Nancy W. Woodard have been awarded academic scholarships by the Old Dominion University Alumni Association.

The Alumni Association sponsors the annual Alumni Merit Scholarship to help attract outstanding students to ODU. The award provides one year's tuition of $816 to incoming freshmen and transfer students.

Asercion, who was valedictorian at Princess Anne High School, is a premedicine major at ODU. She was voted Outstanding Senior Girl in her class.

Casher, valedictorian at Bayside High School, was a member of the National Honor Society and the Tidewater Scholastic Team. A state wrestling champion, Casher is majoring in civil engineering.

Woodard transferred to ODU from Tidewater Community College at Virginia Beach with a 3.96 average.

Schaffer selected as stage manager

David G. Schaffer II, a sophomore theatre major at Seton Hill College, Greensburg, PA, will act as stage manager for the upcoming campus production of William Inge's Pulitzer Prize-winning play "Picnic."

Schaffer, of Virginia Beach, has most recently appeared on the Seton Hill stage as Lane in "The Importance of Being Earnest." His other roles include Harry Berlin in "Luv," and Dr. Bradmen in "Blithe Spirit." He has also done crew work for several productions.

Beach residents elected to VWC parents' committee

The parents of three Virginia Wesleyan College students from Virginia Beach have been elected to the Parents' Advisory Committee, according to Dean of Students W. Thomas Pendergrass.

Serving as the new chairman of the 19 member committee will be Kenneth Fulghum of Chesapeake. He succeeds outgoing chairman Capt. Samuel L. Collins of Virginia Beach.

Elected to the committee from Virginia Beach were John J. Bailey Jr., John E. Dohner and Mrs. Anne B. Owens.

Local Parents head Elon campaign division

Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. DeFord Jr. of Virginia Beach have been named to head the Parents' Division of the Elon College Annual Fund Campaign. The DeForths' son, Bobby, is a freshman at the liberal arts college.

DeFord is a Virginia Beach businessman, and he and his wife have been active in community affairs throughout the city. He is chairman of the Virginia Beach school board and a trustee of the Community Methodist Church.

Additionally, he is a member of the Kemserville Masonic Lodge and the Khedive Temple of the Virginia Beach Shrine Club. He is a trustee of the Virginia Wesleyan College and chairman of the Virginia Beach board of the United Virginia Bankshares/Seaboard National.

The DeForths are both natives of the Tidewater area of Virginia and now live in the Bayside area of Virginia Beach. They have two other children, Shelly a married daughter, and Lisa, a senior at Old Dominion University.

Following last year's successful program with high school seniors, the Virginia Beach Court Docent program this year is being expanded to include sixth grade students in the public schools of Virginia Beach.

The docents, wives of members of the Virginia Beach Bar Association, will host both seniors and sixth graders on tours of the courts at the municipal complex and a tour of the city jail. The program begins the first week of October.

The Court Docent program is designed to provide seniors with firsthand information about the city's legal system and the legal profession, so they can become more effective citizens. The volunteer docents (guides) feel the program also would benefit younger students, since half of all referrals received by the Court Service Unit are teenagers in the sixth through tenth grade.

The sixth graders will participate in the program on Tuesday, and the seniors on Thursdays. Because of time limits and the large number of sixth graders, only about half of this year's sixth grade classes practice law in that particular specialty. For instance, a real estate lawyer teaches the real estate courses and a divorce lawyer teaches the course in domestic relations.

One particularly informative course, Law Office Management, is taught by both an attorney and the manager of a large law office. Students are taught how to order supplies and to keep time sheets. They learn how to evaluate the need for equipment such as word processors or duplicating machines. They also are given skills in handling office personnel, including hiring and evaluation.

Much of the class time in the program is spent in on-the-job training. Students in Real Estate Abstracting spend three-fourths of their time searching titles in the Virginia Beach Clerk's office. Those taking Legal Research will find themselves in the Virginia Beach Law Library actually researching cases.

In order to make sure we are meeting the needs of the legal community, our local Curriculum Advisory Committee is made up of both attorneys and legal secretaries and assistants.

About the only thing a legal assistant can't do is practice law in the courtroom or advise clients. Here at Tidewater, we teach them to do just about everything else.

Parents in school

Mrs. Valerie Reif (left) and Mrs. Georgeanne Londerree cut, draw, and paste language arts teaching materials during a PTA-sponsored parent's workshop held Tuesday, October 30, at King's Grant Elementary School in Virginia Beach.

The two volunteers were among 70 parents who participated in the daylong workshop, which was held to make extra language arts teaching materials which the teachers use to supplement classroom textbooks. The materials are mostly games which are designed to enhance the language arts skills students in grades 1-6 learn from the textbooks, which were adopted this year.

King's Grant principal Carol Smith and librarian Ethyl Brewster coordinated the workshop with PTA chairwoman Betty Blankenship.

Two years ago, the school and its PTA sponsored a similar successful parents' workshop for math teaching materials.

TCC Legal Assistant program fills community need

Director of Continuing Education, Tidewater Community College - Virginia Beach

Here at Tidewater Community College we are always trying to meet the specialized needs of the community. For the past four years, our Legal Assistant Certificate program on the Virginia Beach campus has filled a real gap, not only in the Beach community, but also in the whole Tidewater area.

Our program is designed to prepare individuals in the legal profession to assist attorneys in everything from searching a title to drawing up a separation agreement. Students have come from far away as Williamsburg and Hampton to participate. The next closest legal assistant program in the state is at J. Sargent Reynolds Community College in Richmond.

Courses in the one-year certificate program include such things as Estate Planning, Corporate Law and Law Office Management. Approximately three-fourths of the curriculum is devoted to legal subjects. The other one-fourth includes more general, but applicable, courses, such as Communication skills and Principles of Accounting.

Since there also is a need for legal secretaries to upgrade their skills, the courses are all taught at night to accommodate the working person. In 1978, there were eight graduates of the year-long program; however, almost 100 students took legal courses every quarter.

Because there are not many schools which offer such a program on a community college level, our courses attract a lot of interest. Eric Steentoft, chairperson of our Business Division, said he has received inquiries from all over the country.

All the legal courses are taught by attorneys who

Virginia Beach Court Docent program expanded

Following last year's successful program with high school seniors, the Virginia Beach Court Docent program this year is being expanded to include sixth grade students in the public schools of Virginia Beach.

One of the highlights for the younger students will be a visit with a juvenile court judge in the courtroom setting. The students will have the opportunity to ask questions of the judge.

Court Service personnel will brief the students on local ordinances which are most often violated by teenagers.

Each student will be required to have a signed permission slip. When the slip is sent home, a schedule of the court tour will be attached. The docents hope that when parents see what their children will be doing, it will encourage a family discussion.

Schools participating this year, in order of scheduling are: Alanton, Cooke, Seatack, Trantwood, Linkhorn Park, Kingston, Princess Anne, North Landing, Green Run, Court House, Creeds, Lynnhaven, Brookwood, Plaza, Holland, Windsor Woods, Windsor Oaks, and White Oaks.

The Court Docent program is coordinated by Mrs. Robert Simpson, who will visit each school prior to the tour to talk with the students, teachers, and administrators. Each classroom teacher is provided with a package of information which can be used in the social studies curriculum before the tour.

Mrs. Simpson is directly assisted by Mrs. Steven Strickler, who coordinates school scheduling, and Mrs. Irene Swartz, coordinator of the docent training. Each student group is accompanied by two docents, who have received extensive training.

Last year, the Court Docent program won the "Liberty Bell" award from the Virginia Beach Bar Association.

The annual award recognizes a person or group who promotes a better understanding of the democratic form of government and who encourages a greater respect for law and the courts.

In addition, the Virginia Beach Bar Association has voted to provide a $2,000 grant to help the Docents expand their program, and the State Supreme Court has approved the Docents' efforts and has allocated a $1,800 grant to help.

Mrs. Simpson said other local bar associations in the state are interested in starting a similar program after learning of Virginia Beach's program, but that they seem to have difficulty finding a community group willing to take the responsibility for operating it.

Canadian Goose season opens; high tide helps rail hunters

By ED LEWIS

Virginia Beach Sun Outdoors Writer

Canadian Goose hunting season opened this past Saturday (November 3) on the Eastern Shore, but according to State Game Warden Lieutenant John Crumb, only a handful of hunters were out in Northampton County. I was really surprised to hear that because large flocks of Canadian honkers have been seen headed south over the Eastern Shore already this year.

I guess many hunters feel as I do about duck and goose hunting, if it isn't cold enough to make your feet numb, it is hard to get excited about the hunt.

For those of you who haven't gotten your duck decoys painted up yet, you had better get busy. Opening day for the second phase of duck season is November 20 and you have only two more weeks to prepare. I just finished fiberglassing and painting my duck boat this past weekend and she is about ready to go.

As I told you last week, there was a full moon on Sunday (November 4) and it produced some decent high tides for rail hunting. On Saturday the tides were two feet above normal and those that went enjoyed some excellent shooting.

George Spady of Oyster, Va. took Ferion Baldwin out to New Marsh Saturday morning and both had their limit of marsh hens in 45 minutes and were headed back to Oyster.

George told me that they took all wing shots, which is a little unusual when rail hunting — unless there are plenty of hens, a good tide and a hunter that has enough confidence in his hunting ability to pass up the swim shots and know he will still get his limit.

George is just such a hunter. He was reared around Oyster, Va. and knows all aspects of waterfowl hunting. George not only is an avid hunter but supplements his income by oystering and clamming the seaside marshes around Oyster and is more than capable of making a living on those waters.

Should times on the water get bad, George even has another ace in the hole. He is probably one of the best outboard motor mechanics on the shore and proved that when he repaired mine.

On this side of the bay, deer hunters are enjoying an excellent season. On Monday I talked with Charley Richardson who is the president of the U.S. 17 Hunt Club (formerly George Washington Hunt Club). Charley told me that the hunters at his club had killed 54 deer during October and two of these were eight pointers. Charley feels that November will yield even a larger number.

On the fishing scene, the action at Nags Head has slowed. The bluefish that had blitzed the surf last week moved back north this past weekend. The best action slowed. The bluefish that had blitzed the surf last week moved back north this past weekend. The best action has been at Corolla, N.C., which is north of Duck. A couple of cold days could force these blues southward again to the Nags Head and Hatteras Island area.

Milton at Tatums Bait and Tackle Shop at Nags Head did say that there were a few blues and puppy drum at Oregon Inlet, but the action was not like last week. Milton said he thought they would pick up in the next few days.

In the bay area, tautogs are still dominating the scene for those that wanted to fight the wind that has come with the past two weekends. Rough water in the bay over the weekend kept many anglers dockside, but for those that did make it out to the islands of the bridge-tunnel and fished the lee sides, tautogs were abundant. As the weather turns cooler you can expect an increase in the tautog action and also larger catches of striped bass (rock).

Down at the Northwest River Campgrounds crappie are filling the creel for the freshwater anglers. Otto Nelson told me that Slim Misell of Chesapeake went fishing on Thursday and caught 15 crappie and then returned Friday to boat 15 more. On Friday, W.N. Dean of Chesapeake caught 22 crappie with two of these weighing in as 23 oz. and 19 oz. Also on Friday Jay Lancaster of Norfolk landed 16 crappie. Rowland Marshall "The River Rat" caught 30 crappie on Sunday and M.D. Overton and T.R. Uphold caught 40.

Next week I will have some of the duck and goose decoys I like and some of the patterns I prefer to use when setting them out. I will show you drawings of how floating silhouette work and how to make them. I think you will find them interesting and very inexpensive to make.

For those of you who have loaded your freezers with bluefish, here are a few recipes that were sent to me by the Virginia Institute of Marine Science.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Your Money. How to spend it, save it, & make it work harder for you!

The individual concerned about his personal money matters will, in this day and age, find his banker working overtime to please him with an ever increasing list of services, from tailor-made checking accounts to numerous savings options and a variety of ways to have money at hand for emergencies.

Even as this is written, the Federal Reserve System has under consideration some new deposit categories that could mean higher income for depositors who were previously shut out because they were not able to amass the $1,000 minimum for time deposits.

Lowering the minimum in these deposits (commonly called Certificates of Deposit or Savings Certificates) to $500 and creating a new category of rising-rate instruments (interest increasing from six to eight percent as the certificate approaches maturity) will speed accumulation for the income seeking saver. Also, on the drawing board is a plan to pay an interest bonus to individuals who leave their savings untouched for a 12-month period.

Savings accounts can still be opened for the traditional $1, however, so don't start squirreling away cash, thinking you need $500 before you go to the bank. The time-honored passbook account is the first line of saving for the great multitude, with cash constantly and immediately available to the depositor. Some banks have eliminated the passbook, per se, and furnish a monthly statement for the savings customer.

From there, the saver advances to the special higher-interest account (usually carrying "golden" as a part of the name) and on to the Savings

Certificate, with a variety of options in interest rates and length of time the money must remain on deposit. Any funds withdrawn from these prior to maturity will be penalized, by law, so consider your future needs before you tie up your funds.

There are more ways in which your bank will protect your savings, one being the recently established Individual Retirement Account (IRA) in which you can set aside part of your paycheck, tax free, until your retirement years. Generally, banks invest these in long-term certificates.

The bank's trust department (not every bank has one) can be a boon to the individual who wants protection of his assets without the day-to-day hassle of overseeing them himself. Be comforted to know that regulations make it mandatory for the trust officer to follow the "prudent man rule" in guarding your investments. The trust department, incidentally, is a separate entity so there can be no conflict of interest. The officer is pledged to get the highest return according to the safety you specify, and the whole process is guided by the trust instrument which your attorney draws up to instruct the bank of your wishes.

What Can Your Bank Do For You?

Now, that's how to put money away, safely.

How about using it?

That comes under the heading of checking accounts, and most banks offer four basic types. It will behoove you to study the services available, take a good look at the fringes attached, and decide what best suits your needs, at a charge that is in line with the use you will give the account.

For the individual who keeps a close watch on his account, and is not prone to overspend, the minimum balance checking account is a bargain. In this type of account, there is no service charge so long as the balance doesn't dip below the specified minimum. And today, some banks set that figure as low as $100.

Appealing to many people is the package account, sometimes advertised as a club program. For a flat monthly fee, the customer receives printed checks, maybe an accidental death or dismemberment insurance policy, and a combination of free services in the bank. These could include a safety deposit box, traveler's checks without purchase fee, money orders, certified checks, and other benefits if the need arises.

Another type of account, simple on the surface, is the economy or budget account, which makes a flat per-check charge. Each time you write a check you know your statement will reflect a nickel, dime, maybe a quarter, deduction for the service.

"NOW accounts" (negotiable order of withdrawal) have appeared in some states, in a testing area, and you may want to investigate these if they are available to you. There has been confusion among holders of these accounts, however, if they try to decipher the credits and charges. Initial appeal of NOW accounts is the paying of interest on checking balances, but costs of the complicated bookkeeping can overshoot the benefits.

"One-statement banking" is promoted by a few banks these days with savings, checking, loan information and any other transaction records all listed on one sheet. But those banks that have shied away from the combined reporting claim that many people are inclined to prefer the traditional methods of banking. "Fast, efficient and accurate service is what interests them."

So, we've considered your money — how to protect it and how to use it.

Enjoy Peace of Mind, Freedom from Debt and the Joy of Extra Income.

Are you tired of being just a go-between, as you constantly transfer your hard earned money directly to your creditors? Or of never seeming to have enough money to buy that new house, or to pay for the kids' college education? Are you worried about having enough income after retirement?

ONE SURE ANSWER

A TEST OF WILLPOWER

It's strange that most of us will find the money to pay our bills when they're due, but we find it difficult to pay ourselves. It takes willpower to pay yourself first. But that's the secret: Pay Yourself First!

THE POWER OF COMPOUND INTEREST

Once you start saving regularly, you will be surprised how fast your savings grow, particularly when interest is added and compounded each quarter. Make this factor work for you. Instead of paying interest, enjoy the benefit of this additional income.

PEACE OF MIND

It is hard to be happy when overwhelmed by bills or a potential lack of funds. But a savings account can help give you that necessary peace of mind once you have accumulated sufficient funds to take care of any emergency. Economists recommend an amount equal to minimum of six-months' income to meet this savings goal and satisfy this need.

CONSISTENCY PAYS

The way to accumulate worthwhile savings is to start NOW, and add a regular amount to your savings each payday. The amount is important—for instance, it's better to save $50 a month and not touch your savings than to try to save $100 and have to dip into savings to meet expenses. Pay yourself first. You'll never miss what you never had.

WE MAKE IT EASY

If you have willpower, you can handle it yourself. But if not, we have a remedy. We will arrange to draft upon your checking account on a specified day each month and add this amount to your savings. The draft is similar to your personal check, and will be returned with your cancelled checks.

THE RIGHT ACCOUNT FOR YOU

We have a variety of savings plans available, including individual and joint accounts, and Uniform Gifts to Minors. Our financial counselors can discuss this in detail with you.

SERVICE THROUGHOUT TIDEWATER

When you save at Home Federal, you may deal with any of our ten offices in Tidewater. This means you make deposits, use your savings account as collateral for a savings account or enjoy any of our many services.

INCREASED EARNINGS

Savers who have long term objectives can transfer savings from their 5 1/2% regular savings account or their Golden Eagle 90-day notice account to higher paying certificates and receive the highest interest rates permitted by federal regulations. We offer a variety of certificates, ranging from 6 1/2% for one year to 8% for eight years. In all certificate accounts, there is a penalty for early withdrawal. Our financial counselors can give you complete details.

IT'S UP TO YOU

There's no requirement to save every month. And if you wish to skip a month on the automatic drafting plan, all you have to do is notify us.

PASSBOOKS OR STATEMENTS

You may have your savings either in the long-familiar savings passbook or in a modern statement savings account. Both earn 5 1/2% per annum, with interest paid from the day of deposit to the day of withdrawal.

ALLOTMENT AND SOCIAL SECURITY

Service personnel may arrange with their paymasters to have their monthly allotment or retirement sent directly to Home Federal for credit to their savings account. Those receiving Social Security, Disability Payments or Supplemental Security Income Payments may also have this income sent directly here for credit to their savings account, and thus avoid the possible loss or theft of the check and be assured of daily interest on funds in the account.

SAVINGS INSURED

Savings at Home Federal are protected by reserves which make Home Federal one of the strongest savings and loan associations in the nation. Also, savings are insured to $40,000 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

ACT NOW

Get started on the road to financial security. All it takes is the willpower to save, to pay yourself first. Who knows? You may make yourself rich!

Whether we choose to admit it or not, credit has now become a necessary part of our financial lives. And though fortunes may not necessarily rise and fall solely on credit, pity the poor man or woman who prefers to live by cash alone and never creates a credit history. Like the umbrella you carry in case of a sudden shower, credit is a little extra security tucked in your back pocket for a financially rainy day. Of course, credit may also offer a certain sense of security in the knowledge that you can plan purchases to take advantage of sales and specials, raise money for an attractive investment, finance a house, car or even your child's education. Most importantly, credit helps establish your financial identity.

Before you can even begin to use credit to your financial advantage, you must first establish it. Experts agree that you can accomplish this in one of three ways. First, you can purchase something on a time payment plan. Household appliances, furniture or even a car are likely candidates. Just be sure to always pay on time and even make the last payments ahead of time. Or, open a charge account. Retail specialty shops are usually more willing to extend initial credit than the major department store chains. Do not immediately run up an unwieldy bill (an undesirable situation at any time). Rather, ignore the revolving credit opportunity and pay your bill in full each month. If neither of these methods suits you, you can borrow a small sum of cash for a short term from a bank that you have been doing business with. Married women should borrow from a bank where they have their own account or open one and make regular deposits for several months before applying for a loan. When you do apply for the loan, tell the bank officer that you are trying to establish credit. Then, deposit the borrowed amount in a savings account to gather interest. Pay the loan back in full ahead of the loan expiration date.

If you have already established credit and would like to check your credit rating, you can phone the credit bureau in your city or the largest city near your residence. There may be a small fee, probably less than $5, for this service. What if your credit rating is less than desirable? You can and should take immediate action. First, find out who filed a complaint. Contact them to see how the matter can be cleared up. Sometimes checks and final notices cross in the mail. Sometimes we simply forget to pay a bill. In either case, do whatever is appropriate to straighten out the problem, pay any remaining balance and have your creditor write the credit bureau to clear you. By all means, keep after the creditor and credit bureau until your rating is clear again.

Credit-Wise Spending

Of course there are times when you and your creditor may not be able to agree. For example, you may refuse to pay a contractor for what you consider to be an unfinished job. He doesn't agree and files a complaint with the credit bureau. Your only recourse is to write a letter to the credit bureau explaining the situation. This does not eradicate the negative rating (it remains for six years) but it should help counter it.

Now that you have established credit and a good credit rating, you should learn to use it wisely and to your financial advantage. First, there are those emergencies when you run short of cash but still need to make auto repairs, replace the defunct hot water heater or perhaps buy the children new winter coats and boots. These are a few of the financial rainy days that credit helps us through. You may also want to use credit to help establish your household. Few young families can afford to buy appliances or furniture on an all-cash basis. You should use your good credit at these and other times to plan large purchases around seasonal and special sales. Just keep in mind that planning to buy also means planning to pay. Many people find that credit is simply a convenience. Charging all of your gas and paying for it in full over a month helps to track your expenses. Buying and charging clothing, housewares, etc. when you find them on sale makes sense as long as they are items you really need and can pay for when the bill arrives.

There are times when you may want to use your credit to purchase a service or item that will be used up, so to speak, before you pay for it. Generally this is not a wise use of credit, but like all rules there are exceptions. An example might be borrowing money for a vacation. Your trip will probably be a memory when you get the bill. But if travel is your only credit use and you pay for this trip before embarking on, and perhaps borrowing for, another, you may be Credit isn't as mysterious as you think if you keep your head when using it. Just remember that credit wears two faces. One is snug and secure, there to help in a pinch and plan your purchases. But there is also the bad dollar demon that pops up from an overgrown pile of credit debts.

books and pinch pennies. Actually, your budget may be as detailed or as simple as you can live with comfortably.

Investment experts say that failure to make plans is the most common money management mistake. Before setting up a budget, married couples must be determined to make it an open, joint effort. Since money matters are the subject of much marital discord, it's best to agree from the start on personal allowances for the husband and wife which don't require an item-by-item explanation. Everyone old enough to spend money should be included in the basic decisions of how money will be spent. During your budget session as you separate your income into essentials and goals, your children will learn, too. The shape of your budget will reflect your family's goals and priorities.

Budget Wisely for a Sound Financial Future

If you think inflation is eroding your income, try this test: Write down your 1967 income after Social Security and federal and state income tax deductions. Now record the same information for 1978. If the 1978 amount is not twice the 1967 figure, you have lost buying power.

Careful money management is becoming urgent even for previously upper income brackets. Budget keeping has become a way of life with the high living costs of the 1970's. Many families avoid money management because they think they must live by a rigid set of rules, keep detailed ties. It won't be the same as your neighbors or co-workers.

The key to a good system, is to spread big expenses, such as property taxes and insurance premiums, and saving so each month bears a share of the cost. As you begin to create a workable plan, you might have to get a loan for the big expenses. After that, divide the total of unavoidable bills by 12 and begin setting aside money regularly.

Treat savings as an expense and budget for it just as you do other essentials. Sylvia Porter advises keeping an emergency fund equal to two months take home pay. The important thing is that money is readily accessible for emergencies. As you begin your budget, figure how much more savings you'll need to reach the two month salary level. Decide how long you'll need to save, but don't try to go too fast. Work at it until that goal has been reached and then keep it there for emergencies only. Now you're ready for additional savings. Start with 5% of your total monthly income and raise it as you can.

The day to day expenses are the easiest to control. Before setting up your budget, keep a two week record of everything to get an idea where it goes and what can be trimmed. Don't slash a whole category of expense or paper because it looks big. Consider moving it to spread over the year along with those other large expenses.

Of course, you must leave room for the unexpected in your budget. Then project day to day expenses one to two months ahead on paper.

No matter how much you dislike paper work, to begin a budget there is quite a lot of detail involved. The first month on a budget requires record keeping in order to see if you have set realistic limits. After you have determined your spending pattern, it's not important to account for every penny spent. However, you must be in control of your spending and saving.

We know we should save but "something" keeps coming up. If you find this happening, perhaps you have some forced way to "save" such as an automatic payroll deduction at your job or an automatic bank deduction. You can create your own automatic savings deposit by banking your entire paycheck every tenth week or whatever fits your schedule.

Less rigid ways to save are more successful in developing the saving habit for some people. Quarter jars or dime banks have served generations of loose change savers. This small savings adds up quickly. Another way to save is to deposit all unexpected "windfalls" such as tax refunds, inheritances, bonuses and cash gifts.

Another savings trick is to deposit a specified amount on holidays, family birthdays or other special occasions. Whatever ways you find to save, you'll be pleased with the nest egg you're building.

Just about everyone uses credit borrowing these days. In fact the consumer debt load has been rising right along with prices. Properly used credit is a vital part of money management. Credit enables buyers to finance a home or buy essential items that can be paid for over their useful life. Credit can help you save money if it is used to take advantage of lower prices. Additional education which will increase earnings can be obtained with credit. Money borrowed at a low interest rate can offer a profitable return when carefully invested.

Financing A College Education

For many parents today, one of their major concerns is how to meet the steadily rising costs of providing a college education for their children.

As one would expect, college expenses for this academic year show up as the highest ever. The average cost of education at a four year private college has increased a full 7% since 1968. And tuition is only the beginning; in addition there's room and board, books, supplies, lab fees, transportation and an entertainment fund for weekend relaxing. These necessities, on the average, can add nearly $3000 to the final tab, although prices do vary somewhat from school to school and student to student. To get the most from your investment, state schools, as opposed to private institutions, offer a good education for slightly less, although the gap is closing rapidly. And the tuition for residents is often considerably smaller than it is for non-residents of the state.

Understandably, the best approach to meeting the costs calls for farsighted family planning. Some families set aside specified amounts monthly or quarterly in a bank or special savings account or certificates of deposit. Others buy mutual fund plans or insurance endowment policies a few years ahead of time. Unfortunately, the majority of students and parents must face the impact of the necessary money-hunt only one or two years away from enrollment, leaving themselves little time to accumulate the necessary funds.

Experts say the search for financial aid should begin while the child is a junior in high school, but for late starters, help is available.

The classic and most sought after sources of financial aid are scholarships and grants that don't have to be repaid. These are often provided by local civic groups, university funds and private foundations. Awards range from $50 to full four year tuition packages. Such money grants often go to students from families with two or more children in college, whose incomes go as high as $15,000 to $40,000 so don't overlook this route just because you think you make too much money to qualify for aid. Any number of extenuating circumstances can demonstrate need on your part. Also, many states award tuition scholarships to students based upon their ACT scores (a test required of high school students who plan to attend college). A minimum score is usually necessary and from there the student goes on to prove financial need.

For those who must borrow, there are two Federal programs to look into. The first involves loans from local banks with the principal insured by the government, and in some cases, the government will also pay the interest. Many loans of this type do not require the first payment until as many as eight or nine months after the student graduates. The second is the National Direct Student Loan Program, administered through the individual colleges and universities. The popularity of the government-backed loans is reflective of their usual low-interest rate of around 4%.

A limited number of colleges have special private funds which permit loans for as little as 3% and 4%.

For children with some income of their own, such as savings from a summer job or payments from a small inheritance, it is suggested that, under certain conditions, the parents forgo any income tax exemption for the child. If there is a prospect of getting a loan or scholarship, not claiming the child would most certainly bolster the student's case for financial aid.

When the entire cost of college falls upon the parents, it is best met, if possible, with pre-tax dollars. Let's say a parent owns assets that have risen in value — common stock, for example. Parents can give it to the child when they sell it to pay expenses. This procedure serves to divert the capital gains income from the parent to the child who usually would not be subject to much income tax liability. And the parent pays no federal gift tax on gifts up to $3000 for any one year, or $6000 if both parents are joint donors.

Just don't panic when you realize your child is ready for college but you're not ready with the cash. Assistance is available but you must seek it out. Check with local banks, or the college where the student applies, for helpful information on various aid programs. Check into all the different kinds and don't disqualify yourself before you have the facts. *

Banking

Banks are wooing you with "save by mail," drive-up windows, neighborhood facilities and branches, clubs that offer trips and social events, and particularly in this day and age, a banker assigned to help you, personally, with your finances. This may include leading you through the maze of fringes offered by the bank and the host of regulations that determine whether or not you can benefit.

It is to your advantage to investigate all the avenues available to keep your financial house in order. Consumer banking is the emphasis of the present and the wave of the future. The banks stand ready to help you.

Smart Shoppers

Smart shoppers spend time considering possible purchases before spending their cash.

It pays to ask yourself these questions first:

- Is it current? (Am I dickering for a previous year's model?)
- Is it backed? (Is there a guarantee, warranty or seller's word going for me in case of a problem?)
- Is it indispensable? (Will I live without it?)
- Is it needed? (Do I have something to do the same work or service?)
- Is it priced right? (Do I know the going value?)

About 10% of a family's budget goes for clothing and shoes; statistics show (and 60% of these purchases are selected by the lady of the house.)

The saving of a single percentage point of a year's expenses yields a pretty penny.

Able merchants are rhythmic in the presentation of goods to customers, with offerings put on sale in accordance with annual trade shows, seasonal promotions, and manufacturers' advertising.

While basic tax deductions generally remain the same from tax return to tax return, rules do differ slightly from year to year. Items like the standard deduction and amounts for dependents are two examples. Understanding the "rules" and having the records necessary to verify your expenditures are the keys to correct payment. Books are available usually around the first of November that discuss the upcoming tax structure. And after January 1, the best source of information and explanation is the Internal Revenue Service. You can contact your local office or check the telephone directory or information for the WATS number. But, in both of these cases, you must have the facts at hand, the all-important records, in order to explain your question so that you can get the assistance you require. In addition, a vast store of information is available at your public library or book store.

Good record keeping is the most important aspect of accurate tax paying. That kind of planning must start before the actual calendar year commences. There are many types of record keeping systems that you can buy at an office supply store, local dime store or discount store, as well as at the drug store. Don't let the word "system" confuse you. It merely refers to a "way" to keep accurate accounts of what you spend, why and where. It's a good idea to check out as many systems as you can before you buy anything to make sure that the method you choose will fit your needs.

Records for income tax deductions can be any number of things: a cancelled check or even a check stub; a cash register tape; a hand-written receipt; a stub from a restaurant bill; a ticket from a toll bridge; the remains of an airline ticket; anything that will verify the amount spent and on what date can be used as a record. This is especially important if you own your own business.

Records should be kept either by the month or by categories. If you choose a book, like a small ledger book, you can title each page and write down the amounts under each heading, again either by the month or by the category. If you select the category method, your year end compilation will be greatly simplified because all the figures for each major group will be in one place and all you have to do is total them. The monthly system, however, can be important insofar as setting up a budget and seeing exactly how much you spend on what for your family's needs or for your business. Another adaptation of the record keeping system is using a file folder for each month or each category. If the ends are closed, you merely drop the bill or receipt into the folder (car expense, medical, dental, business expense, etc.).

Keep receipts for everything and note on the back of each one the date (if it doesn't appear on the receipt) as well as what it was for. Another good idea is to indicate, if possible, the particular tax deduction category you intend to put the receipt in. Then it's a simple matter of sorting when you are ready to figure your taxes. And simplicity of record keeping is really the name of the game.

Besides, the record keeping system, a calculator or adding machine is a great time saver. And, both of them are accurate, more accurate than the human process of addition and subtraction. Careful shopping will also minimize the cost to you.

Now armed with records and information on new tax laws and a reliable adding device, you're ready to eliminate the income tax problem.

Here are just a few things to keep in mind that might apply to your particular tax situation.

If you are a working parent, with a family income of less than $35,000 per year, a deduction is available for child care outside your home or inside your home. Here again, it might be wise to check into this aspect of your taxes before you make a decision about where you will have your children cared for should you require outside care for them. If you pay someone in your home and you pay that individual more than $50.00 per quarter, in order to take the deduction, you must also pay social security for them.

Earned income credit is another rarely used item. Explanation is always located in the front of the tax booklet you receive every year. In essence, it applies to incomes of less than $8,000 and results in some cases in a negative income tax.

Making gifts of money to relatives within a given tax year is an area that has had some drastic changes in the last few years.

Home Improvement as an Investment

Perhaps you know a homeowner who needed more room for a growing family and opted for expansion to the attached garage. Now the car stays on the driveway while it snows and snows.

Unfortunately, as the cost of real estate swings higher, many people choose remodeling projects that will hinder the sale of their home later. Not every improvement will produce a dollars and cents result at closing time, nor should they. The aim of any improvement is to increase your family's comfort, first, and add to resale value, second.

The four major home improvements; kitchen, bedroom, bathroom and family room, are also the most profitable come selling time. However, it is not advisable to undertake any of these projects with the idea of making a quick sale. A prospective buyer may have different tastes and habits. Or a do-it-yourself buyer would like a challenge and a bargain.

A word of caution on the do-it-yourself home remodeling job. The quality of workmanship determines the dollar value added. Even the best major improvement returns only 75% of cost.

Although no exact figures are available on the relationship of home improvements and selling price, realtors, appraisers and financial institutions can advise you on valued improvements in your area. For example, central air conditioning added to existing ducts returns 50-75% of cost. If existing ductwork isn't adequate for air conditioning, the extra cost negates any sale value. In some areas an attractive deck can clinch the sale. Fireplaces are profitable when they are free standing models. A two car garage addition brings a financial return, but as we mentioned a garage conversion does not. Room additions that must be reached through another room create an awkward floor plan and add no sales value.

Before beginning any improvement, take an informal neighborhood survey. Find out how much more houses in your area sell for when they have the features you're planning to add compared to those without. It's important not to over improve for your neighborhood. An improvement of $20,000 on your $30,000 home in a $30,000 area would be foolish unless you are in an area about to be declared an historic preservation district or another anticipated growth area. Likewise, the style of your addition must fit the architecture of your home and blend well with the neighborhood. Your own well loved oddity may appear as a white elephant to a prospective buyer!

A few improvements result in no direct profit, but buyers have come to expect them. An older home with a new roof, furnace or wiring indicates general good care. Energy savers are really popular today. Caulking, storm windows and doors, and insulation all rate high with home shoppers.

There are minor improvements that help sell a home. These are not costly, but add to that important first impression. Realtors and appraisers agree that measures taken to help the property look well and prosperous favorably influence the sale. Attractive landscaping adds to resale value, but is usually taken for granted by buyers. Trees can reduce air conditioning costs. Shrubs trained to wind-sail height, front and tall corner plantings 2' to 3', the height of the roof line improve the foundation appearance. A well cared for lawn attracts attention, however it takes only 3 or 4 years and a low investment to correct a failing lawn. Go slowly before making an investment in landscaping.

On the other hand, a general clean up always pays off. There are many minor improvements that help sell a home. Repair cracked plaster; wash dirty walls; paint interior and exterior where needed; fix broken tiles and leaky faucets; replace ripped screens and loose hinges. If carpeting is in bad repair, replace it with good basic beige or gold.

It may be an exaggeration to state that there are as many ways to finance a home as there are houses on the market, but if you can convince a lender that you are a good credit risk, there's a better than equal chance he can come up with a mortgage that will enable you to become a home owner.

Once you have chosen your home, it's up to you to make the financial arrangements. If you shop around among banks, savings and loan associations and mortgage companies, you will hear different offers. Some lenders will be more lenient with older homes; others may favor only new houses. Arrangements for construction loans vary with different lending firms, and you will need to delve into this matter if you plan to build a home.

Some such loans are good only through the construction period, with necessity to refinance when the house is completed. Others can be continued as the final loan, with the first payment on principal due when you move in. In either case you will pay interest on the money used throughout the construction period, and you will have to agree to some stipulations to protect the lender should there be delays or failure to finish the building.

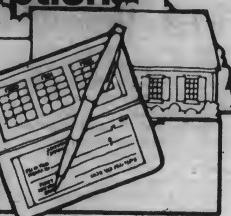

If you choose not to build, you may, in your hunt for a home, find an opportunity to take over an existing mortgage. This will give you the benefit of lower closing fees and possibly a better interest rate than on a new loan. But chances are you will not be able to assume the old loan at its original rate, if it is considerably lower than the current going rate.

Mortgage Options

To Suit Your Needs

If you are borrowing on a new conventional loan (not government sponsored) a lender may quote a flat interest rate, regardless of the price you agree to pay for your home and the portion you need to borrow. Another institution may offer you a lower rate (half a per cent or so) if your down payment is well above the minimum. And remember that the loan formula will be based on the appraisal; not on what you actually agree to pay to the seller.

Shopping around to get the lowest possible borrowing rate can mean a sizeable saving over the life of the loan. The number of years you pay, also, is a factor in your total cost. While many buyers string payments out for 30 years, if allowed to do so, some lenders prefer to write mortgages for no more than 25 years. The difference in payments is small, each month, but the extra five years can add thousands of dollars.

Look on the chart, for instance, at a loan of $25,000 at 10 1/4 per cent. At $232 monthly for 25 years you will pay $69,600, but if you stretch the debt over 30 years it will cost you $80,640 ($224 per month for 360 months). That extra $8 on the monthly payment can be worth $11,040 over the life of the loan.

Attractive to some who can qualify is the VA (Veterans Administration) loan, also known as the GI loan, for which veterans may apply and can possibly borrow with no down payment. The borrowing limit is a generous $10,000 and the plan can be used more than once by a veteran, but on only one house at a time.

All government loans for housing stipulate that the property be owner-occupied. Money is not available for multiple-family dwellings of more than four units, and then only if the owner lives in one of the apartments.

For FHA loans, the down payment must be at least three per cent of the first $25,000 and five per cent of any amount over that, with a $60,000 limit. A $50,000 loan, for example, calls for a minimum $2,500 down. Be prepared with facts and figures when you apply, and don't try to rush the process, for the paperwork may take several weeks before you have approval. When the deal is set, you will be expected to make monthly payments of real estate taxes and hazard insurance as a part of your check, over and above the installment.

You may be applying for your loan at a mortgage company which does not actually "keep" your loan. Such a firm does all of the paper work, carrying you from application to approval, and retains a part of your debt, damage you may cause to the property of others, and all the costs of defending against lawsuits whether you are liable or not. In addition, it protects your property from loss caused by such familiar perils as smoke and fire, windstorm, hail, explosion, lightning and glass breakage. Plus HO-1 insures against damage from non-owned vehicles, aircraft, riot and civil commotion and theft or on or off the premises.

Insuring Your Possessions

The second policy type is Homeowners Broad Form 2 which includes all the perils covered by HO-1 plus it covers damage from owned vehicles, falling objects, collapse of buildings, tearing or bulging of water-heating appliances, weight of ice and snow, freezing of plumbing system and water escape from appliances.

The third type of policy is Homeowners Special Form 3 which gives you the most comprehensive coverage so of course it costs more than the others. However, your home must meet certain safety standards to qualify.

For example, if the wiring in your home is fairly old, you are not eligible. HO-3 offers dwelling coverage for all risks except certain specified perils such as earthquakes and floods. It also offers coverage for damage to or loss of personal property caused by any of the perils covered by HO-1 or HO-2.

The fourth and final type is Homeowners (Renter's) Policy 4. This protects personal property from all the perils of HO-1 or HO-2, but applies only to those renting.

In addition to the actual house garage structure, all the policies above also protect the items in your home like clothes, furniture, TV's, refrigerators, rugs, stereos, records and tapes. The amount of coverage on these items and the amount of reimbursement in the event of damage hinges upon many factors. When you take out a policy, your agent will ask for the current monetary value of any cameras, bicycles, stereos and records and make a note of this amount on your policy. When you enter a claim for damages on any of these items, your reimbursement will depend on factors such as the years the item has served you and its depreciation value over those years and the current cost of replacement. So if your ten-year-old TV and stereo are stolen, all this information will help your agent work out a fair settlement.

It is wise to note that items of significant value are protected only up to certain limits on any homeowners policy. For instance, jewelry and furs together are usually insured for only up to $500 on most policies. Anything over that would require a policy adjustment to provide the extra coverage needed.

Coins, stamps and other valuable objects not regularly covered in the policy require a special floater clause. This shouldn't be neglected because if not handled properly, you could suffer a great loss.

This brings up the task of proving an item's worth. You must have everything of great value appraised by an expert and get documented proof of what it is worth.

It is also helpful to take photographs of important property to use as extra support in the event of a loss. The insurance company will always insist on tangible evidence of value. All such proof should be safely stored somewhere away from the house, such as in a safe deposit box at the bank.

Aside from any special floaters or amendments you request, homeowners policies all over the country are basically the same. Only the price varies so you should definitely shop around and compare companies. Individual states put a ceiling on rates but a company is free to set premiums anywhere below that amount.

servicing the loan throughout its life.

There will be discussion of closing costs so that you thoroughly understand what is expected of you, should the loan go through, and then the loan committee or underwriting department of the institution will make a decision, yes or no, on writing your mortgage. The seller's title to the property will be checked, and if all is in order and the underwriters give the go-ahead, a closing date will be set.

Your house and the special possessions inside that make it a home mean a great deal to you and your family. In fact, they play such a major part that many people take their presence for granted and neglect to properly safeguard them. This is where a sound homeowner's policy serves you. You should select one specially suited to your needs in order to get protection you can count on should misfortune strike your home or valuable contained within.

As a general rule, there are four basic types of homeowner policies on the market to choose from. All the coverages apply to certain causes of damage called perils. The perils you are insured against vary according to the type of policy you have.

The first type is Homeowners Basic Form 1. This policy protects you yourself from important and potentially expensive liabilities by providing for comprehensive personal liability, medical payments, physical

Why You Need a Will

Most of us work hard to provide a safe and secure home for our families. We battle inflation to balance an unruly budget, sacrifice extras to save even a small nest egg and protect our families with health insurance. Yet precious few of us take the time and trouble to write a will assuring our families security after our death.

None of the excuses for not writing a will is really acceptable. Of course none of us really cares to face our own mortality and plan for our family's life after our death. Many people feel that they simply don't have enough assets to require writing a will. Yet the size of your estate, which always turns out to be far larger than you expect, is only one consideration in writing your will. Finally, many people feel that writing their wills necessitates putting their finances in order.

A well-written will is designed to do far more than simply pass an estate on to the appropriate heirs. Its primary purpose is, of course, to distribute your property as you see fit. Without a will even the most obvious distribution may not be possible. For example, in some states a wife will only receive one-third of her husband's property (including some which is jointly owned) and their children are automatically awarded the remainder unless a will specifies otherwise.

The second priority in writing a will should be to minimize taxes. Here a competent attorney is absolutely necessary. Both the federal government and the state tax estates. While federal taxation is the same from state to state, you can minimize it with appropriate planning. State taxes vary widely. If you move your residence to another state or establish a second residence, your tax picture may alter radically. Under these circumstances, it is best to have your will reviewed for any appropriate changes.

Because there will always be taxes and/or funeral expenses, your estate planning should provide enough liquid assets to pay these bills. Burial expenses have first priority for payment. The Internal Revenue Service allows a minimum of nine months to pay federal taxes and this can be extended. Your state may have other requirements, but remember that all taxes must be paid before the rest of your bequests can be made. Since the major asset in most estates is often a house, your heirs could be forced to sell it too quickly to pay the estate taxes due. The same is true of securities. Keep in mind that savings accounts may be sealed until the estate is settled. Instead you should have sufficient life insurance to meet these initial financial demands on your estate. To minimize taxes on your insurance benefits, your spouse (beneficiary) should own your insurance policy. Your insurance agent can explain the procedures for this.

Your final priority in writing a will should be to keep it as flexible as possible. This helps to avoid costly and time-consuming revisions every time your personal circumstances change. A good way to build flexibility is to refrain from noting specific dollar amounts in bequests. Instead think of your estate as a whole and divide it into percentages among your heirs.

Perhaps one of the best reasons for young people to write their wills is to provide a guardian for minor children. In lieu of an appointed guardian, the court will necessarily have to make a choice of which the parents may have disapproved. It is important, of course, to talk over the substantial responsibilities involved with a prospective guardian.

Trusts are often established by wills to care for minor or dependent children or family members. Basically a trust is a holding function. A person or institution, for example, your bank, is named trustee and holds your properties (real estate, securities, etc.) and pays income to the beneficiary of the trust. Trusts may also be initiated without a will and during the lifetime of the creator of the trust. They will still perform the same basic function.

Every will names an executor to carry out the wishes of the deceased. While many people are tempted to name close family or friends, it really makes more sense to name your bank. The responsibility for carrying out the business of any will is a fulltime job and requires the knowledge of a professional. You can always name a family member or friend as co-executor.

Today there is a lot of talk about writing your will yourself. This is certainly possible but just as certain to be risky. For one thing, legal language is a barrier to most nonprofessionals and a mix-up can change your meaning entirely. Also the tax planning advantages so important to writing a will are lost without professional help.

Finally, you can begin your estate planning with a careful inventory of all of your assets: savings, real estate, securities, insurance and Social Security benefits. Your lawyer will need to know those along with birth and marriage certificates, account and policy numbers, and so on. Initially all of this seems like an overwhelming task, but the benefits to you and and heirs far outweigh the labor.

Investing?

Talk to the Experts

Money buys lots of things. Having "money in the bank" is the old adage that is synonymous with security or "having something to fall back on". Sometimes it's not how much money you have that is important. Sometimes it's WHAT you do with the money that you have that really counts. Prudent investing allows you to use the money that you have to its full advantage.

Most of us buy stock and savings bonds because we are accustomed to buying them and we basically understand them. We don't have to do a lot of footwork and investigative inquiry and analyses of figures. Especially when the savings bonds are concerned. However, there are alternative investments that many of us don't know much about and therefore don't take advantage of. That lack of knowledge and know-how could keep us from realizing the full potential of our investment availabilities.

There's a fairly new approach to an old idea in investing called an investment counselor. Investment counselors can provide a multitude of services including advice on what to buy and how this purchase will fit into an overall scheme of investing. It can also include managing the portfolio of investments including the bookkeeping and reporting required for management of an estate or a trust, for example. Some firms will provide you with services similar to that of a trust department of a bank. Others merely act as a guide in helping you select a multi-faceted approach to having your money make more money.

In larger cities, especially, careful investigation of a company or an individual is important. The factor of reliability must be established. Ask questions regarding the education and experience of the person you're about to deal with. How long has he been with the company or how long has he been in business for himself? What types of clients does he serve? What services does he offer? How much will these services cost? If the answers do not satisfy you, move on to another company.

In the light of the constantly changing economic structure of the world, we cannot expect to know all the newest trends and prudent investment procedures. Many times a "bad" investment turns out to be one that was ill-timed, hastily done or perhaps failed from lack of knowledge. Professional advice is always important and seeking out the experts could mean really increasing your "something to fall back on" potential in a comparatively short period of time. *

Investing Your Money

If you think of investments only as something for the financially well-off, you might just as easily think about how those same people earned their financial security. While for some it may be true that it takes money to make money, others begin far more modestly, plot their financial goals and work their way to economic security. Of course this takes time, saving hard and often some sacrificing. But if you consider all of the paychecks ahead of you and fail to devise a plan for even a small portion, you can easily throw away thousands of dollars. Financial analysts agree that a plan for saving and investing, rather than spending, on a regular basis is the backbone of financial security. And it's just as important to have a saving rather than a spending plan for any financial windfalls — bonuses, tax returns, inheritances.

First, while many of us feel most secure with our emergency funds in a regular savings account, the 5½% earnings are somewhat slim. You can easily boost savings earnings with a certificate of deposit. These are usually available in $1,000 amounts, but they earn more because you are lending the bank your money for a stated time, from three months to seven years. The longer the time commitment, the higher the interest rate. And, if the interest is compounded, your yield (or actual earnings) is greater. If you must, you can withdraw a certificate of deposit before its term is up. You will pay an interest penalty, but not enough to prohibit cashing the certificate. You can also usually borrow against your certificates, most often from the bank or savings and loan that is holding them.

Treasury notes, bonds and bills are also very secure investments since they are backed by the U.S. government. Easiest to purchase are Series EE bonds available through most payroll savings plans. Also popular now since they pay perhaps the best rate for a secure investment are Treasury bills in $10,000 denominations. These are short term investments for as little as 90 days and paying as much as 9% or better. Other government notes are available for various amounts and terms. Perhaps most attractive, Treasuries are exempt from state and local taxes.

Aside from savings plans, the stock market is probably the most likely source of investments for many people. Less secure than the time savings plans above, it also offers a greater chance for gain and of course for loss. Essentially, stock is a fragment of ownership in a given company. The value of the stock rises (and falls) with the company's fortunes. Overall, the basic business climate has been positive and so most stocks have fared well in the long run.

The most successful stock investors have a diversified portfolio of growth and income stocks. Briefly, growth stocks are usually in younger companies that pay few dividends but in which market value fluctuates more rapidly. Income stocks are in older, established firms. They are more expensively initially, often pay handsome dividends and rise in value slowly as the economy grows.

A few more notes about stock investment are important. Despite the ease with which you can buy and sell stocks, advisers warn against investing funds that should remain liquid. You could be forced to sell at a loss just to raise cash. You need patience and some financial liquidity to survive the inevitable market slumps. You should also take time to follow your investments. Keep an eye out for new opportunities and sell losers. Finally, keep careful records. Stock market gains are taxable and you will need receipts of your transactions.

If playing the market on your own seems too risky or time consuming, consider mutual funds. These are simply pooled investments. The fund buys and sells stocks and in turn sells shares of its total to investors at a price per share. This price fluctuates with the market value of the stocks in the fund. Mutual funds offer several advantages. Small investors get fractional shares in some of the expensive, blue chip stocks, bonds, etc. Mutual funds are specially set up to encourage regular investing on a monthly or quarterly basis. The regularity of the plan is the keystone of a secure future. Before investing in any fund, study several to see how their overall track record has been. Your stock broker can be a great help here.

Options and commodities are special, high-risk investments that also require sound financial backing. Options are just what they imply, options to buy a stock. Your broker can help you understand and possibly invest in this market. Commodities refer to expected crops — corn, beans, wheat, etc. — and their trading depends on the fluctuation in supply and demand. Commodities trade on separate markets. They are a high-risk investment that requires substantial backing and expert guidance from a commodities broker.

Real estate has always been a profitable investment. Today, in spite of and perhaps because of inflation, real estate is more lucrative than ever. In fact the average national gain on real estate is 18%. This fluctuates from locale to locale. Besides these attractive returns, real estate also offers other financial bonuses. First, it lends the investor leverage, or the ability to invest a large sum with a small amount of cash since most of the investment can usually be borrowed with the real estate itself serving as collateral. Real estate also offers investors considerable tax shelters for their earnings.

Tips and Tactics

Buying and Selling Your Home

Home ownership is, without a doubt, the single largest financial step most families take. And considering today's steadily rising housing costs, the decision to buy, build and/or sell is certainly not one to take lightly. Rather, prospective buyers and sellers would do well to carefully consider all of the legal, financial and practical implications of the move they are about to make.

The Buyer Beware

In most areas, the prospective buyer bears all of the responsibility for physical and legal inspections of the property as well as the details of financing. Keep in mind, too, that since the purchase of a home has such far-reaching financial repercussions for you and your family, it's well worth it to be "in the know."

First, decide what you can actually afford. Determine how much of a cash down payment you can make Next, determine your housing priorities. Bear in mind that what your family wants may considerably exceed what you realistically need in terms of space and location. Develop a list of "musts" as well as some "nice to haves." Don't forget to include such factors as transportation, access to schools, churches, shopping and recreational facilities. And, since there is no perfect home, be prepared to make a few concessions.

Take your time to shop. Look at a variety of houses and price ranges to see what your housing dollars will buy. Be honest in looking at each house. Don't be sold by darling curtains when the house is just too small. Some flaws like worn carpeting or old paint are easily remedied. Others like an out-moded kitchen can also be fixed but at greater expense. Are the renovations worth it? Decide just how much you are willing to tackle and consider the cost of any repairs immediately necessary.

Besides the physical structure, you should also determine certain intangibles. Consider the general character of the neighborhood. Is it well-kept or showing some signs of decay? Are many homes for sale? In these energy-conscious times, you also owe it to yourself and your wallet to ask about heating and cooling costs. Are the property taxes stable? Are they buying competent community services? Don't be afraid of asking for expert advice. Have reputable professionals inspect questionable furnace, wiring and the like.

Making an Offer

Signed by you and the seller, your "offer to buy" becomes a sales contract and therefore is legally binding. If a purchase is going to falter, it will probably do so because of a misunderstanding here. Whether it's written by a realtor or your lawyer, be sure your offer includes the purchase price, down payment and your financing method of course, as well as a legal description of the property and any items (stove, etc.) to be included. Don't forget to spell out any factors that may void this contract and also the conditions for the return or forfeiture of your earnest money if that should happen. Include any other applicable agreements. By all means, insist on a contract that meets all of your needs and protects your interests and dollars.

Once the seller has accepted your offer (and don't be discouraged if you have to do a little haggling), you owe him the courtesy of beginning the financing procedures, title search and so on as soon as possible. Ask your lawyer, realtor and/or banker to continue to oversee these activities but you must also do the same to protect your interests.

Selling Your Home

Whether you sell your home yourself or use the services of a real estate agent, you will still need to do some homework yourself. First, be prepared for questions from realtors, appraisers, or prospects by arming yourself with any and all pertinent facts: lot size, room dimensions, age of the house, furnace, water heater and so on, taxes and assessments, utility costs, school districts. Try to anticipate every question a prospective buyer might have. Don't over-sell but above all be honest.

Of course you should get your home in company shape before you show it. While many people feel that fresh paint and so on helps enhance the selling of a home, just as many others feel it's a waste of time. Do, however, get your home and yard clean. Remember that prospective buyers will be looking into every nook and cranny, so clear clutter from closets, pantry, basement, garage and so on.

Arrive at a reasonable selling price. You can do this on your own or with a realtor by studying the prices of comparable homes sold recently in your neighborhood. You can also engage an independent appraiser. Keep in mind that if you use a realtor, his sales commission comes off the top of your sale price. However, his services may be well worth the effort since he will advertise the house, screen prospective buyers, show your home, handle all offers-to buy and usually also arrange the closing.

We bring great neighbors together!

In Praise of Giving Thanks

Beset by hostile neighbors, burdened with wooden plows which barely turned the soil and firearms which frightened as much game as they bagged, there was little reason for joy among the nation's first settlers.

But, occasionally, Providence heaped on their tables bounties from the fields and forests.
And it was time for thanksgiving.

Now food comes easily to the home, although often at inflated cost. But starvation here is rare.
Still, the need for giving thanks is perhaps more important than ever.

Those of us at Haynes, in the tradition of those early settlers, invite you to join us in appreciation of the bounties of 1979.

Swingin' sax

Carey home assignments after school band practice can be a chore. But 13-year-old Randy Etheridge of Virginia Beach came up with an idea to make the job easier. He picked up a pole found while walking home from school and enlisted the help of a friend John Keeter, age 13. Together, they were able to swing that saxophone home! Both boys are students at Point-O-View Elementary School.

As the holiday season draws near, what better way to get into the spirit than by visiting a nearby Christmas tree farm to choose and cut that special Christmas tree. The 1979 Christmas Tree Directory, listing 24 Christmas tree farms throughout the state, is now available free from the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services. Copies may be obtained by writing CHRISTMAS TREES, VDACS, 203 North Governor Street, Richmond, Virginia 23219 or by calling (804) 786-3951.

The directory, a cooperative project of the Virginia Christmas Tree Growers Association and VDACS, Division of Markets, lists the farms according to region along with their phone numbers, directions, hours and products. A variety of Christmas trees is being offered by the growers, including Scotch and white pine, blue spruce and fir. Some of the farms also have wreaths, fresh evergreens and ornaments for sale to complete your holiday decorating. It's an outing the whole family will enjoy.

Consumers are strongly urged to call in advance to determine if tree supplies are adequate. The trees sell quickly, so calling ahead will prevent making an unnecessary trip.

When you choose the Christmas tree and cut it yourself or have it cut, you get the tree you want and one that will last. Because the needles are fresh and full of water, the tree is less likely to catch on fire.

Mobile home ordinance causes confusion for Beach grandfather

Albert S. Twiford will get to place a mobile home behind his house at 5437 Morris Neck Road for his grandson and his wife.

For awhile at Virginia Beach City Council meeting last week it looked as though Twiford wasn't going to be permitted to let his grandson use his property. "I've got 50 acres on that land and you're telling me I can't give any to my children."

The city's mobile home ordinance permits mobile homes in agricultural zones for relatives where there is a primary dwelling. The approval can be given administratively unless an adjoining property owner complains.

In Twiford's case an adjoining property owner did object, although Twiford said the property owner lives elsewhere.

Twiford was also confused about the difference between giving the property to his grandson, which would involve a subdivision ordinance, and just placing the mobile home on the property which would come under the mobile home ordinance.

The subdivision ordinance requires a 150-foot frontage on a public road which the proposed mobile home site does not have. The mobile home ordinance requires that the home remain "mobile."

After council understood that Twiford did not plan to deed over the property to his grandson, council approved the permit and instructed City Manager George L. Hanbury to explain all the ramifications to Twiford and his grandson later.

City awards construction contracts

Whitfield/Gee Construction Company, Inc., has been awarded the contract to build the 1,960 square foot addition to the City Garage for $419,750.

The low bid submitted by Whitfield compares with the $430,000 estimate of the cost by the city.

The expansion will provide three additional pool areas, a reception area, a clerical section and an office for the superintendent and assistant superintendent.

Council has also awarded a contract for the Princess Anne Park Restroom Facility to North Landing Line / Construction for $117,973, the low bid of six. The estimate was $117,000.

City to add air conditioning to two elementary schools

The Linkhorn Park and Seatack Elementary schools will be air conditioned for a total of $489,080 appropriated from the general fund by Virginia Beach City Council last week.

The school board will finance air conditioning for the Cooke and Creeds Elementary Schools with existing funding, but requested financing for the other two schools to take advantage of existing bid prices.

Major reason for the need for air conditioning, according to City Manager George L. Hanbury, are the noise from the Oceana Naval Air Station and heavy road noise from Laskin Road and the Virginia Beach Expressway. Other reasons given were a cleaner environment, security of the buildings and preservation of equipment and audiovisual supplies from summer heat.

Pembroke Lake: will it become a mud flat?

It will cost the City of Virginia Beach $175,000 to save Pembroke Lake from the fate of a mud flat.

The expenditure would make happy the 72 families who live in the lake area, but council has some doubts about spending public money to improve private property. It floods over into their yards.

What the people want is to maintain the level of the lake and to have flood control.

The spillway is located on property which was deeded to the city, but City Attorney Dale Bimson said that the city can abandon the spillway if it chooses.

City Manager George L. Hanbury, in giving the report on the spillway at an informal council session last week, said council had to decide what its commitment to the people were and why money should be spent on the lake.

The situation can be improved by extending the concrete construction and getting rid of the berm.

Councilman John A. Baum said that the expenditure would obligate all taxpayers to benefit a few people.

Hanbury said, "We feel it's been going on so long council has a moral commitment." The spillway was dedicated to the city in 1968.

Councilman Clarence A. Holland said that the cost might be written off against increased assessments. "If we dumped it six years ago I wouldn't be too concerned."

Alcohol ranks top in drug abuse

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN

The average Virginia Beach adult uses emotion-altering drugs every day of his or her adult life. These are the common items which are used to elevate or express emotions and the day usually starts with caffeine, goes to nicotine, and follows through with unwinding with alcohol in the evening and going to sleep with prescribed drugs.

Young drug abusers are getting the bulk of attention and concern, but if the concern was based on numbers, or the suffering, sickness, or death caused in the total view of the drug abuse picture, adult abuse would dominate the scene.

It is a cold hard fact that addiction is a major problem of life destruction in this country and in most civilized areas of the world. But which drug ranks No. 1? No contest - alcohol wins hands down.

It is doubtful, according to social experts that any chemical or drug past and future will be as devastating or as costly to society as the present price we are paying for the unrestricted use of alcohol. Heroin, LSD, uppers, downers, marijuanna, opium and PCP all together cannot get started in the race compared to the wreckage caused by alcohol.

Why do people take drugs? To change the way they feel about themselves or their situations. People want to feel differently so when they are insecure, lonely, unhappy, guilty, or just plain bored, they take a chemical vacation by the pill, joint or glass.

Drugs that block the depressed feeling are the barbiturates or opium derivatives, but the top of the list of the most commonly used is alcohol. Chemicals which give you an "up", which mask fatigue feeling are stimulants, i.e. caffeine, cocaine, nicotine and marijuanna.

To be human is to have emotional stress. Everyone has problems and obstacles. When we are faced with pressures and we fail for one reason or another to put our hand on a solution, we grow tired of the struggle.

We feel like a failure in a country where there are to be no failures, and each of us see all around us the daily symbols of success. So 12 million are alcoholics in the United States, 150,000 new addicts are added to the human wrecking yard every year, plus half of all the traffic deaths are laid at the door of this legal drug.

Two billion arrests yearly are caused by the misuse of alcohol, the annual loss of wages is set at $17 billion and 70 percent of prisoners are serving their sentence in jail with alcohol involvement. Add that one in four suicides has a history of alcohol abuse, and you have a good picture of which drug is the truly dangerous drug in our culture.

Other drugs or chemicals are more addicting than alcohol, but no other drug has such a wide use or so terrible and tragic consequences to one's self and to others. Dr. Harvey Clinebell notes that 54 percent of all admissions to mental hospitals are suffering from alcoholism, 29 percent of all males now in mental hospitals are chronic alcoholics, while 38 percent of family court cases involve excessive drinking. Eighteen to 27 percent of all families now on welfare have an alcoholic family member.

No one I have ever counseled ever started out to become an alcoholic. To try to find happiness in a chemical is to chase a rainbow.

The drug which I meet in the wreckage of human life most consistently is not being smuggled across any border, or used by the young as a symbol of rebellion. It is socially encouraged and will kill more people this year than any year of the recent Vietnam conflict.

There is help as close as the nearest phone. Ask for the number of Alcoholic Anonymous. They have been there and can give anyone caught in this web of drug abuse a hand, listening ear and help to a better life.

Indian Translation of Psalm 23

The Great White Father above is a shepherd chief. I am His, and with Him I want not. He throws out to me a rope and the name of the rope is love, and He draws me to where the grass is green and the water not dangerous, and I eat and lie down satisfied. Sometimes my heart is very weak and falls down, but He lifts it up again and draws me into a good road. His name is Wonderful.

Sometimes . . . it may be very soon; it may be longer; it may be a long time He will draw me into a place between the mountains. It is dark there, but I'll be afraid not, for it is there between the mountains that the Shepherd Chief will meet me, and the hunger I have left in my heart all through this life will be satisfied.

Sometimes He makes the love rope into whip, but afterwards He gives me a staff to lean on. He spreads a table before me with all kinds of food. He puts His hand upon my head and all the "tired" is gone. My cup He fills till it runs over.

What I tell you is true, I lie not, these roads that are "away ahead" will stay with me through this life, and afterwards I will go to live in the big tepees and sit down with the Shepherd Chief forever.

United Way chairman says thanks to Beach residents

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

In a campaign of this magnitude, it is impossible to thank everyone personally who made a contribution; but we would like to express our sincere gratitude and appreciation to the many employees, and the residents of the Tidewater area for their outstanding support of the 1979/80 Four Cities United Way campaign.

None of our accomplishments would have been realized, of course, without a personal commitment from thousands of dedicated volunteer workers. Their continued involvement in the United Way maintains and strengthens our community - making it a better place to work and live.

So, on behalf of the 1979/80 Four Cities United Way team, the United Way, and its sixty-three member agencies, my sincere thanks for your co-operation and wholehearted support.

Antique ShowSale a success

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

In behalf of the Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach, I wish to extend our profound gratitude for your recent article and picture in the Virginia Beach Sun to publicize and promote our twenty-first Antique ShowSale.

You deserve much credit for the continuous success of our Antique ShowSale.

Sincerely,
Rheba L. Nixon

Advice from the Veterans Administration

Q. - I retired last year at age 62 because of illness. I served in World War II but suffered no disability in service. Is there a veteran's pension available to me?

A. - To qualify for non-service connected pension before age 65, a veteran must be rated permanently and totally disabled by the Veterans Administration. Over age 65, there is no such requirement. In both cases there are strict limitations on income from non-VA sources.

Q. - I have been honorably discharged after four years of active military service. What is my GI Bill educational entitlement?

A. - Four years of active military service entitles a veteran to 45 months of educational assistance. It must be used within 10 years after discharge or release from service.

Q. - I am a Vietnam Era veteran who is unable to find employment. Am I eligible for unemployment compensation?

A. - Generally, a veteran with 90 days or more of continuous service is entitled to unemployment benefits under federal law. Contact your local state employment service for specific eligibility requirements.

What mail order buyers should know

The elderly and those living at a distance from stores have long known that shopping by mail is a convenient way to buy a wide variety of goods. Its increasing popularity has created an industry that is well-established and substantial. However, consumers are sometimes dissatisfied with mail order service, as the large number of complaints concerning mail order businesses received by Better Business Bureau each year indicate.

Mail order buyers should be aware that the delivery of merchandise, any needed repairs or replacements, and refunds will take longer, particularly during the holiday season. By realizing this and by exercising common sense, consumers can reduce the possibility of dissatisfaction.

Practical investigation

Before placing an order through the mail, find out about the seller. Do you know anyone who has done business with the company before? If so, find out if their experience was a good one. Was the merchandise delivered in a reasonable time? Did the product match its description in the catalog or ad? Was it worth the price? If the business is unknown, call the Better Business Bureau for information on the company.

Scrutinize the advertising for the product carefully. Is the item clearly described? Does the ad offer a refund if the buyer is dissatisfied? Does the price sound reasonable? Sometimes mail order merchandise is a bargain, sometimes it is not. Do some comparative shopping before ordering. Find out if the price is competitive with those in local stores.

Most common complaint:

Ads or catalogs usually make general statements about how long it will take to ship the merchandise. The most frequent cause of mail order complaints is later-than-promised delivery. The Federal Trade Commission has set some comprehensive rules to deal with this problem.

If the seller doesn't say how long it will take to provide the merchandise, the goods must be shipped within 30 days after a properly completed order is received. The buyer can cancel the order if the merchandise isn't received shortly after the 30-day period. If the seller can't deliver by the promised or required date, the buyer must be notified of the new shipping date and given the choice of accepting the new date or canceling the order for a full refund. But there are exceptions - COD orders, credit orders in which the buyer's account is not charged before goods are shipped, and orders for photo finishing, seeds, growing plants, and magazine subscriptions are among those to which the rules don't apply.

Handling problems

When ordering merchandise by mail, the prudent consumer will retain records for use if a complaint becomes necessary later. Items to keep include ads and catalogs; a copy of the filled-in order blank; canceled checks, money order or charge account records; acknowledgements or receipts; and all correspondence. Buyers shouldn't pay for mail order goods in cash - checks or money orders are much safer and provide a record of the transaction.

Consumers with mail order problems should take them first to the mail order company. In most cases this will be enough to resolve the matter, especially if satisfaction is guaranteed. If the problem persists, the Better Business Bureau stands ready to help.

New SSI rules on resources

By HARVEY RIDINGER

Field Representative, Social Security Administration, Virginia Beach Area

Virginia Beach people who previously applied for supplemental security income (SSI) payments and were denied because of excess resources may now be eligible.

New regulations effective November 1, 1979, change the way a person's resources (assets) are evaluated under the SSI program.

The regulations do not change the actual resource limits. To be eligible for SSI checks, countable resources still cannot exceed $1,500 for an individual or $2,250 for a couple. But the method for figuring the amount of a person's countable resources has been changed.

All resources, except for cars, will now be evaluated on the basis of their equity value, rather than their current market value. The equity value is the price an item can be expected to sell for on the open market, minus any amount still owed on the item.

As in the past, part of the value of personal effects, household goods, and a car will be disregarded. But the part that does not count has been increased.

Personal effects and household goods will not be counted if their total equity value is $2,000 or less. If their total equity value exceeds $2,000, the excess counts against the resource limit.

Prior to November 1, personal effects and household goods were not counted if they had a total market value of $1,500 or less.

If a person owns a car, only the portion of the current market value which exceeds $4,500 will count. Current market value means the average price a car of that particular year, make, model, and condition will sell for on the open market in the particular geographic area.

A car won't count at all if it is used by the household for transportation to a job or to a place for regular treatment of a specific medical problem or if it is modified for use by a handicapped person.

Before November 1, only $1,200 of a car's retail value was disregarded, and the rules did not except a car because it had been modified for a handicapped person.

If a claimant owns more than one car, the equity value of each counts against the resource limit.

Area artists featured in photography exhibit at VWC

The art department of Virginia Wesleyan College will present an exhibit of photographs as its first show this fall in the college's Hofheimer Library. The show will run through November 30.

The exhibit by Tidewater area photographers is in conjunction with the visiting artist class taught by guest instructor Phil Morrison, according to VWC associate professor of art Barclay Sheaks.

The artists include: Irene Upshur, Bill Quinn, Minnie Fleming, Margaret Welch, David Johnson, Wallace Dreyer and Rod Mann.

Va. Beach Sheriff's Association elects officers for coming year

TCC tells local success stories

Director of Continuing Education, Tidewater Community College - Virginia Beach

Over the past few months, several events have occurred of which we are very proud here on the Virginia Beach Campus of Tidewater Community College.

Last month, we found that graduates from our respiratory therapy program scored higher than the national average on their national certification examination. The exam is given to technicians who have been out of school at least one year. Former TCC students scored an average of 81 points while the national average was 79. In addition, 86 percent of our graduates passed the examination while only 56 percent of all who took the test had passing grades.

Many of our graduates stay in the Tidewater area and go to work at local hospitals. Of last year's graduating class, 60 percent are out working in the community.

We also were pleased to learn that the Cooperative Education Program on all TCC Campuses received $122,060 in grant money for its 1979-80 program. The grant application was prepared by Sam Lamb, coordinator of our Virginia Beach Campus' Co-op program.

The award, made under the authority of the Higher Education Act (HEA), Title VIII, is the largest such grant HEA made to any institution in the state for 1979-80. It is more than twice as large as the next highest grant of $48,450, which was awarded by HEA to Northern Virginia Community College in Annandale.

The grant is the fourth the college has received in a five-year cycle of HEA grants. During the first year, 70 students participated in the program. Last year, there were 648 students participating. Our goal for this year is 700-750 students.

Students from the Virginia Beach campus can be found working in our community in curriculum-related jobs such as drafting, data processing, secretarial positions and business management programs.

This past summer, two TCC courses, designed to train elementary and secondary school teachers in substance abuse education, received a high evaluation from the Executive Director of the Tidewater Council on Alcoholism.

Council Director Thomas M. Slaven summarized his report by saying, "the two courses, 'Drug Use and Abuse in Pre-Teen Years' and 'Drug Use and Abuse in Teenage Years' made a statistically significant impact on both knowledge and attitudes. Based on an extensive review of the literature, this appears to be one of the first pretest-post test, experimental-control group research design that has delivered significant results regarding attitude change toward substance use and abuse."

The courses were designed under the direction of Dr. Jagdish P. Mathur, chairman of our Industrial and Public Service Technologies Division here on the Virginia Beach campus, Betty Perry, associate professor of physical education, and Jack Andrews, director of the Tidewater Virginia Alcoholic Safety Program, established and assisted a task force of other Virginia Beach campus faculty members in developing the two-course curriculum.

The courses were designed at the request of the Norfolk Public School system, however, both courses were offered at the Virginia Beach campus last summer and will be offered here again in the spring.

In all three cases, our success is cause for more than just an in-house celebration. Our respiratory therapy and cooperative education programs and the substance abuse curriculum all have a direct impact on our community. We are proud that our successes can also be shared by the city of Virginia Beach.

Today college counts!

Local church to send missionaries to Dominion Rep.

By PAM VANDEVEER

Virginia Beach Sun Editor

Members of the Tidewater Central Church of the Nazarene in Virginia Beach are working to send a group of men to the Dominican Republic to repair buildings damaged by Hurricanes David and Frederick. The church hopes to raise $5,000 to purchase the necessary building materials.

"There are no funds in the Dominican Republic for reconstruction of buildings that were damaged by the hurricanes," explains Barbara Ackison, president of the congregation's Nazarene World Missionary Society. "We plan to send a group of men from our church who will rebuild homes and churches."

This marks the third year that the church has pursued this missionary project. Buildings constructed by church members during the last two years withstood the effects of the recent hurricanes. However, many other structures on the island remain in shambles.

"Our group constructs sturdy building out of cinder block," says Mrs. Ackison. Building materials are purchased in the Dominican Republic to avoid shipping costs and to add some money to the area's economy.

The Virginia Beach church has so far raised $1,000 for the project, according to Rose Howard, vice president of the missionary society. They hope to be able to send their workers by January. The group will remain in the Dominican Republic for 10 days.

"We are asking for donations from local business people to help us reach our goal," states Mrs. Ackison. "We will also sponsor several fund-raising projects. The individuals traveling in the group have volunteered to pay their own transportation costs. The money we raise will be used to purchase building materials."

Interested donors may call 463-0463, 467-5793 or contact Rev. Loren W. Gould at the church, located at 5514 Parliament Drive in Kempsville;

Gettysburg Address anniversary

Do you remember the first words of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address? Delivered on November 19, 1863, Lincoln began, "Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal."

Gettysburg, in southern Pennsylvania, was the site of a battle of the Civil War fought in July of 1863.

When you want to brush up on the rest of the Gettysburg Address or on your history, geography, or current events, come to the Virginia Beach Public Library, where you'll find the atlases, maps, magazines and documents you might need.

Virginia Beach elementary school children won five first place awards recently in the Commonwealth of Virginia International Year of the Child Art Contest. There were more than 600 entries, and only 28 first place certificates awarded.

There were also 15 second place awards and 11 third place awards statewide. Of those, Virginia Beach elementary school students won two of the second place certificates. In addition, two Virginia Beach students won an honorable mention award.

The drawings and paintings done by the children have already been on display at Thalhimer's Department Store in Richmond, at the Virginia State Fair, and at the Blue Cross/Blus Shield building in Richmond.

The art works will now be awarded to a business or organization that has helped the state's Division of Children with activities during 1979, the International Year of the Child. They will become part of a permanent collection.

The first place Virginia Beach winners are: Joan Kuhns and Liz Cyrus, both of whom attend Newtown Road Elementary School, and Michael Andrew Howell, who attends Hermitage Elementary School. Greg Pearlman and Patricia Beruke, who were students in the city last year, were the other two first place winners.

Second place winners are Berita Gadsen of Newtown Road Elementary and Rey Toros at Brookwood Elementary.

Robin Reaser of Newtown Road Elementary won an honorable mention, as did Reginald Linnette, who attended Newtown Road last year.

In another recent art contest sponsored by Q-Tips nationally, Ashle Russell and Chrissy Petrie of Virginia Beach each won a fourth prize of a $50 U.S. Savings Bond.

Free workshop teaches hand-laid papermaking

A free workshop in making hand-laid paper will be offered to the community by the Virginia Beach Arts Center on November 19, from 7 to 10 p.m. Lee Brady and Francis O'Connor, artists in residence at the arts center, worked intensively with a master papermaker at Twinrocker Paper Mill in Brookston, Indiana, last summer. They will give a brief history of the art, a demonstration, and a critique of paper pulled by those who attend this free Monday night workshop. Registration will be limited, so call the arts center for details at 428-9294.

Boy Scouts prepare 'Enterprise '79' show

The 1979 Tidewater Council, Boy Scouts of America Show, titled "Enterprise '79", will be held from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, November 17, in Norfolk Scope. Participating in the seventh annual show will be scouts from Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake and North Carolina.

"Enterprise '79" will feature a variety of action displays, stage shows, and contests. The show will be produced by Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorers in the area.

How your money grows through the years

By JUDITH G.
RHOADES

Q. If I save "so much" money each month, how much money will I have in five, 10 or 20 years?

A. This particular question is probably on the minds of many of my Virginia Beach readers. The answer depends on the type of savings account you have, the amount of interest paid, and how the institution compounds your money.

The fastest way for your money to grow is if your funds are compounded on a daily basis. This means that the principal is compounded, and that interest is paid on interest.

For example, if you deposited $10 each month in a savings account at 5.25 percent interest, in 10 years you would have approximately $1,600. If you could manage to put away $100 per month, in 10 years you would have almost $16,000.

Naturally, the larger amount of money you can afford to save, the more interest you will have which can be compounded along with your original investment. If you will check at the savings institution, they can probably provide you with a chart which will show you exactly how your money will compound.

Q. Inflation and food prices here in Tidewater are almost as bad as gasoline prices. Isn't there an easy way to cope with this problem?

A. One of the best ways to cope with our rising food prices is to shop carefully. You can probably trim your present grocery bills by almost 20 percent if you shop for bargains, buy no-frills-type items, use coupons and try to utilize the unbranded products whenever possible.

In order to ease the pain, you might be interested to know that we in the United States are spending a smaller proportion of our after-tax dollars on groceries than was spent in 1940. According to a survey done by The Family Banker, a publication of Continental Bank, Americans eat better than most other people.

In Japan, for example, beef costs about $12 per pound and the Japanese eat beef about twice a year. In Argentina, it takes 63 minutes of work to buy a pound of sirloin beefsteak, in France 40 minutes and Australia, 26 B.O.

You and your money

minutes. Americans work only 19 minutes, and we work fewer hours to buy our food than the people of any other major industrialized country.

The Family Banker does give some interesting information as to how to shop carefully. As consumers, our economy responds quickly to whatever choices we make. Inspired by competitive pressures, chicken, pork and turkey producers have rushed to fill the gap left by the high cost of beef. Some of your meat meals could be replaced with dishes that include such less expensive sources of protein as eggs, milk, cheese or beans.

One of the last comments was to review your overall shopping habits. They can be modified effectively and painlessly to save money. Try an experiment in shopping with a friend. One person selects the least expensive choice on the shopping list while the other chooses the most expensive. Generally, the basket containing the least expensive choices will total about one-half the cost of the other basket.

It's helpful to evaluate your own shopping habits with the idea of changing those that may be adding to your grocery bill unnecessarily.

Roll old newspapers now for winter fireplace logs

By GENE GARY

Q. I have a redwood deck porch which is now about six months old on my home in Belamy Manor. The wood has already turned a grayish beige. The question is — should the wood be treated and with what? I am getting differing opinions on this. Please advise. — M.P.P.

A. All untreated redwood will weather to a silvery gray. It would be difficult to restore the original redwood color now, but here are suggestions for a water-repellent preservative finish:

A water-repellent preservative is a solution of hydrocarbon wax, such as paraffin, resin or resin and a nonvolatile oil, and a preservative, such as a chlorinated phenol in mineral spirits or other volatile solvents. It penetrates and continues for some time to spread into the wood. The wax and possibly the resin and oil make the surface of the wood repellent to water, and the preservative adds mildew and decay resistance to the wood.

Q. Can you please print the directions on how to soak, roll and treat old newspapers to make "logs" for winter burning in the fireplace? This might be a good time of year to prepare the logs, since they'll be able to dry quickly in the Beach's early fall weather. Thank for your column. — John B.O.

Here's how

A. Yes, now is a good time to prepare paper logs that you can make yourself.

These logs, a good example of recycling made practical and easy, are made of rolled-up papers, soaked in a salt solution and thoroughly dried. Use them just as you would wooden logs. They are easy to light, long lasting and give good heat and burn with a bright, colorful flame.

To make the logs, you need only these items — newspapers, magazines and scrap paper of all types, including junk mail.

Take two pounds each of coarse salt and borax, heavy twine, transparent tape, a four- or five-gallon non-metallic container, such as an earthenware or plastic not affected by boiling water. A five-gallon plastic trash can is a suitable utensil.

First, make the solution by putting the salt and borax into the container. Then pour in two gallons of boiling water, stir vigorously to dissolve the solids as much as possible, and let the solution cool, stirring from time to time.

Then stand the logs on end in the solution in the container. Put as many as you can without crowding or causing an overflow. The solution should rise to the top of the container. If it does not, add warm water to fill.

Let the logs soak for about 24 hours. Add two quarts of warm water and turn the logs upside down.

Let soak, turning several times, for two or three days, or until all the liquid has been absorbed.

Remove from the container and lay the logs on paper in a warm place. Let the logs dry thoroughly, about two weeks.

Incidentally, when rolling the logs from old newspapers or magazines, make a paper pile that is thicker in the center than at the ends. Start at one end and roll up very tightly to form a log about three inches in diameter. The tighter you roll, the denser the finished log and the longer it will burn.

Secure the roll with transparent tape while you tie it at the ends and center with heavy twine.

Regular auto care prevents breakdown

By GLEN H. MITCHELL

Executive Specialist, Consumer Education

Regular auto care, in the form of simple checks and tune-ups, can reduce maintenance costs significantly. Through attention to upkeep, Virginia Beach car owners should be able to catch small faults and failures before they develop into large and costly problems, or cause breakdowns on the road.

With the help of an owner's shop manual, drivers can do much of the checks, changes, and simple repairs necessary to keep a car in good running condition.

Tires, including the spare, should be checked every week or so for proper inflation; ample tread; and to make sure they have no bulges, cuts or breaks. Improperly inflated tires can increase fuel consumption, and will wear out quickly. Uneven wear can also be an indication of poor wheel alignment or balance, which limits the life of the tires. A person skilled in tire service should align the wheels and balance the tires.

Battery fluid should be checked at least once a week unless the car has one of the new sealed batteries. Windshield wiper fluid or antifreeze and radiator coolant levels should also be checked weekly. Fluid levels in the brakes, engine, power steering, transmission, and differential should be checked periodically, according to the schedule suggested in the owner's manual.

About every 1500 miles the fan, power steering, air conditioner, and generator or alternator belts; and the radiator, heater, and air conditioner hoses should be checked to be sure they are not loose, hard, or cracked.

It's easy to check the brake system each time the car is on the road. There should not be too much pedal movement before the brakes seem to take hold, the brakes should not grab or pull to the left or right, and there should be no scratchy sound when the brakes are applied. A "mushy" pedal indicates air in the hydraulic lines. The emergency brake should also be checked periodically.

The exhaust system should be checked periodically for leaks, so that carbon monoxide cannot escape into the car.

Once or twice a week all lights should be checked. Battery terminals should be kept clean and free of corrosion. Windshield wipers should be neither broken nor cracked so that some part of the blade holder makes contact with the windshield.

Light ideas for a dark room

By BARBARA HARTUNG

Q. We have a very dark dining room in our older Lyndhaven home and I'd like to lighten the room with paint and new floor.

Now the room is an avocado green and the carpeting which matches the living room is sea green. However, many spills on the dining room carpeting and its hard wear make me feel I would like to remove the carpet entirely and start over.

I like modern designs, although the room at this time has no personality because we are using an old hand-me-down table and chairs I'd like to replace.

Please suggest some ideas for improving the looks of this room. —T.P.

A. Certain light colors will enlarge your room and make it seem lighter. Avocado green can be pretty dark when there is no or little artificial light in the room.

If you wish to create all the light you can, perhaps a foil wallpaper would reflect light from a large, imposing chandelier or wall lights. Or you might consider installing spots of light in the ceiling that would wash your walls and provide a pleasant level of illumination.

Use reflective materials in your furnishings, too, for maximum light — choosing from materials such glass, chrome, brass and mirror.

An interesting and intriguing idea is offered by Bill Marley, director of color and design for GAF floor products. Marley turned a tiny, dark space in a 60-year-old divided townhouse into a bright, airy and very contemporary dining room. The space had only one small window that opened onto an air shaft.

Marley screened the old cracked and peeling plaster walls with sheets of translucent frosted vinyl set on the bias and positioned in moldings at the floor and ceiling. Behind the panels, warm fluorescent lights were installed.

Tubes were recessed behind the floor molding so that their light would be diffused as it washed up the walls. Stainless steel angles sold in lengths at building supply stores hold the vinyl panels in position.

A feeling of sculptural lightlessness is seen in the ceiling-hung lighting fixtures which floats like a pleated paper cloud over the dining table.

The original wood floor needed replacing and so Marley installed Gastrar's "Lace Circles" with self-stick back and a white with light brown snowflake design.

Q. I'd like to cover my bedroom lampshades with a new fabric I'm using for my bedspread and a table skirt. Do you know where to go for directions on how to pleat your own lampshades? —T.P.

A. Try the Simplicity pattern book. Directions are given for lampshades among other decorative items for the home. In fact, it's surprising how many good ideas to inspire our do-it-yourself instincts are carried in the pattern books.

Q. We have a casual Beach life-style and like to have buffets. I have a problem when entertaining because I like traditional designs and very comfortable upholstered pieces, but our rooms are not large. Do you have any ideas for increasing seating, especially for casual entertaining?

We have a small sofa in our room, a pair of small basket chairs and a lounge chair. I might have room for some additional seating but not too much.

Please send questions for Decor Score to the Virginia Beach Sun.

The lighted walls are accomplished by installing warm fluorescent lights behind sheets of translucent frosted vinyl set on the bias and positioned in moldings at the floor and ceiling.

It pays to check an old house

By CLYDE V. SMITH

Special to the Virginia Beach Sun

You've found an old house in Virginia Beach. It was built 30 or more years ago. You believe it fits your housing needs. You like the neighborhood. The price is lower than a new house with comparable rooms and space. You can afford the

Or if you have space for a long narrow table in your room to use as a buffet or library table or sofa-back table, you could slip nicely upholstered little benches under it to impress your guests.

Everything looks rosy now. It appears that you and your family are destined for a new home in an old house. A good idea, to be sure, or so it seems.

But, without intending to discourage you, have you checked out a few key items that could cause you later disappointment? House building is so complex and involves so many components that it is almost impossible to anticipate all of the things that can go wrong. But there are a few major checkpoints that should guide anyone who is considering the purchase of an existing house.

Here are some pointers for those who want to be cautious:

— Termites. Insist on a termite inspection and clearance. The termite recalls are unpredictable.

They may show up in a wood-frame house that is only five years old or less, while other houses built 50, 60 or more years ago may have escaped infestation. Older houses, however, are more suspect. It is a problem that can be treated and corrected, unless drastic structural damage has already been inflicted.

It is important to check plumbing and roofs in older houses and note the fact that appliances, particularly those in the kitchen, may not be up to modern built-in standards. As for roofs, if you find deficiencies in any of these items, it does not necessarily mean you shouldn't buy the house.

existing house. Just be aware of the problem, how serious it is and the probable cost of repairs, if needed.

Maintenance will be necessary with any old house. That's part of the price and possibly the fun that goes with home ownership.

Cut home fuel bills up to 50%.

Reduce your fuel bills by as much as 50% with Aerolite Foam Insulation. Full wall and ceiling insulation means life time savings and year-round comfort.

Aerolite, one of the highest rated insulating products available, fills uninsulated wall spaces to serve as a permanent barrier against transfer of heat through outside walls. Aerolite provides better protection than blown wool, glass fiber and granular fill. The better it insulates...the more energy it saves...and the lower your fuel bills will be.

Aerolite effectively insulates new and older homes. And it's practical for all types of construction.

Decline in housing affects economy

By LIN J. COOPER

Director of Communications, Tidewater Builders Association

The housing industry represents a very important chunk in the economy of the City of Virginia Beach, particularly since the city is still in such a rapid growth pattern. Housing ranks with trade, tourism and the government when one takes into account not only those directly employed by the industry, but also the stimulant that new home sales provide to other economic sectors.

Out of the 100 persons who buy homes at the Beach every two weeks, 95 will purchase drapes; 65 will buy power tools; 89 will purchase $100 or more of landscaping materials; 32 will need major kitchen appliances, and so on. And of course the city well recognizes the impact of the tax revenues it collects from both the builder and the new homeowner.

The latest action of the Federal Reserve Board will undoubtedly affect this economic situation...adversely. While Tidewater tends to be better insulated against the effects of scarce money and high interest than other areas of the country, there does now exist a definite uncertainty among persons familiar with the industry and its up and down history.

The tight money approach currently being employed by the federal government is basically unequitable. Large corporations manage. It is the working people and small businesses who are driven out of the marketplace and out of business. The overwhelming percentage of home builders are small, not large, businessmen.

Here's what happens. Construction money, at two points above the prime rate, becomes prohibitively expensive or hard to get, thus forcing the small builder to build fewer of an even more expensive product or none at all if he goes out of business.

The 11½ percent VA and FHA rate with seven points, not to mention the conventional rate, is discouraging to home buyers. Coupled with the inflationary 10 to 14 percent rise in the price of housing, the prospective home buyer just can't keep up.

As an example, the average $60,000 home with a 20 percent down, 15 percent interest rate, 30-year conventional mortgage carries a $607 monthly principal and interest payment. Based on current predictions, next year that same house will cost $66,000. The additional down payment will be $1200 meaning an additional monthly payment of $60. Just to offset the increase, a family will need a $2890 rise in income. Just to offset the increase. One can readily understand why families are slipping behind, and why so many of them are postponing their homebuying desires.

So builders don't build and buyers don't buy. What does that mean? Doesn't it mean that prices will fall and inflation will slow? Perhaps. For the shortfall. But this doesn't take into account the one very important factor. The underlying demand for housing doesn't go away.

Anyone who doesn't believe that Virginia Beach is still very much in an expansion/growth cycle hasn't followed the city's history very long. Inflation is cooled temporarily, really just stalled, because as soon as the credit restraints are lifted, the market surges forward in an attempt to accommodate the pent-up demand. However builders, suppliers and subcontractors have left the business. Inventories are way down. The population suddenly wants and needs homes. The insufficient supply and the industry's inability to quickly respond mean even higher new home prices and higher interest rates.

Government should look for ways to increase productivity, to encourage investment by business and saving by consumers, to reduce reckless government spending policies, and to increase the supply of essential goods. These may be the answers to inflation, not widespread unemployment in an industry which recovers slowly and not the discouragement of thousands of moderate income families struggling to make a living and purchase a home.

New sources of protein for the future

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian

Foods of the future, what will they be? Can we continue to expand the populations of the earth without concern about how they will be fed? The answer is no. Even today, much of the world is starving, while others are over nourished and overweight. There is an impending protein crisis.

Recent research and development in food technology have begun to point the way. New sources of protein may help solve food problems, not only in other countries, but in our own United States. We have been led to believe that only animal protein is adequate in the essential amino acids, and anything less has not been well received by the vast majority of the American public.

Most people will turn up their nose at the thought of eating textured vegetable protein products, demanding instead expensive steaks, chops and roasts. The vegetable protein foods, however, may well become the foods of the future.

Modern technology has been able to produce vegetable protein products from soybean, cottonseed and those that simulate meat in texture, flavor and nutritional specification. Soybeans are the most common source, since they contain the highest content and quality protein of any legumes. They formerly were prized mostly for their oil content, but now protein is the major concern. Nutritionally, they are a good source of the essential amino acids, with methionine being in the lowest proportion. This is easily rectified by adding milk or grain protein to soybean.

The versatility of these products is one of their main advantages. Soy meats do not shrink, and when used as meat extenders, they have a great affinity for holding juice and flavor.

Hamburger meat could be easily extended to double or triple the quantity. Not a bad idea, in these days of skyrocketing food costs. Soy protein can be dried and stored in tightly covered containers for future use, and rehydrated in minutes. They are also available canned or frozen. There are many different brands on the market. Ask your local market manager to help you locate them.

Fish protein concentrate is another stable product, mild enough to be fed to very young children, along with other foods. Much attention has been given lately to developing bland, odorless products from abundant fish species not usually sold except as animal feed or fertilizer. The ocean and the plant world probably will be our greatest suppliers of the future.

Corn is another versatile source of both protein and oil. Adding the missing essential amino acids, linole and methionine, to corn products elevates them to high quality protein standards. Similar results are achieved when linole is added to wheat protein. The utilizable protein essentially is doubled.

As new protein products become available in American food markets, people may lower their food budgets substantially, and still maintain high quality nutrition, without relying on meat every day. Meat

Racquet sports and vision

Anyone in Virginia Beach playing racquetball, squash, tennis or badminton should wear eye protection, says the president of the Virginia Optometric Association. According to Dr. George Gillespie, government figures show that several thousand Americans suffer eye injuries every year while playing racquet sports and the number is growing. Some have had potentially blinding injuries requiring surgery or laser beam treatment.

"Good eye protection equipment is available for racquet sports and it won't interfere with your game," Dr. Gillespie said. "It is made to protect without blocking your vision. Of course, if you do not have the vision skills for your sport to start with, the eye protection device won't improve your game either."

He said racquetball and squash players' eyes are most often injured by the racquet or the opponent's body. Tennis and badminton players face the greatest eye injury risk from the ball or shuttlecock. Eye protection devices for racquet sports can be purchased in sporting goods stores or at some racquetball courts. There are several styles from which to choose.

Dr. Gillespie warned that eyeglasses prescribed for everyday wear, even though they have impact-resistant lenses, do not offer sufficient protection for racquet sports. Neither do contact lenses. He extenders can be used in casseroles, meat loafs, thick soups, goulash, chili, vegetable-nut loaf, meat patties and seemingly endless combinations with other foods.

Soybean milk with vitamin D added is also available. Substituting one-fourth portion of soy flour for wheat flour can increase the protein content of flour or baked products.

If you have a large family and the pinch at the supermarket is getting you down, investigate these interesting protein products to stretch the food budget.

Dear Shirley: Are the fluid products advertised especially for athletes during hot weather training better than water? —D.C.

Dear D.C.: They are, for the most part, OK but they may contain too much sugar and salt, which delays the water absorption. I suggest you dilute them. There is nothing wrong with plain water when you are thirsty.

Questions may be sent to Shirley Bright Boody, Eat Yourself Slim, in care of the Virginia Beach Sun.

Congestion may cause nose pressure

By WILLIAM J.
GOLDWAG, M.D.

Q. I am writing this letter concerning a tremendous amount of pressure in my head and lately it has been mostly behind my nose. I do not, to my knowledge, have any sort of sinus problem, but this is very annoying.

I find the pressure is more intense when I lie down and when I first awaken in the mornings before I get up.

I don't know what kind of a doctor I should see. Any help or ideas as to what the problem may be, would be greatly appreciated.

A. Based on statistics, your type of complaint would be most likely due to congestion in the nasopharynx secondary to either chronic sinus infection or swelling due to allergic factors. On the other hand, there are many other conditions that must be ruled out.

The presence of nasal discharge, mucus, blood or other symptoms associated would be important to know about.

In some people, just being in the head-down position for any length of time may be enough to permit swelling of the nasal membranes. In this case, just elevating the head end of the bed on 4- to 6-inch blocks under the legs may be enough to eliminate the problem.

Your first important step is to have a competent physician examine you. If you have a family physician, see him. If not, and you want to go straight to a specialist, I would suggest a nose and throat specialist.

He can examine the area completely to be certain there are no tumors or growths in the region. He can also get a pretty good idea from the examination whether or not you have any substantial infection in the sinuses. He may want X rays or lab tests such as blood count or nasal smears to aid in the diagnosis. He can check your blood pressure and with the aid of more detailed history narrow down the possibilities even further.

In the meantime try raising the head of the bed. You might also check the room for animal hair and dust (allergies) and possibly new materials or chemicals used in your room that you might be sensitive to.

Q. Every day I live I am more concerned, incredulous and troubled about bags under the eyes. To date I have heard four different theories, offered by medical doctors and eye specialists.

Isn't there one specific reason for them, or does the cause differ with different people? I have never read an article dealing with this particular condition. Why is it such a widely misunderstood and widely controversial issue?

Now I am more concerned than before for I have had them for about two years and I am baffled. I feel quite sure that they have nothing to do with general health, but I am just about as buoyantly healthy as anyone whom you would meet. I am never overweight and I swim and walk miles.

Will you be accommodating and print your own explanation or theory? I feel sure that many of your Beach readers would welcome it.

A. My feeling is that one thing this world does NOT need is more new theories so I will not add mine to the growing storehouse.

(The truth is that I have no theory for it).

I have had a number of patients who complain of the same situation. Most of the time it turns out to be just a matter of their particular appearance. Some of us have long noses, some have big ears, and others heavy legs. Similarly, bags under the eyes are usually just there — no special reason.

Ask the doctor

Now there are some medical conditions that can be at fault and these have to be checked out in someone who is not sure of their good health. Hypothyroidism (underactive thyroid) or a related type of hormone disorder can create bagsy eyes. Kidney disease and water retention from a variety of disorders can also exaggerate this tendency to swelling under the eyes. Depressed people can have it if they do a great deal of crying. A heavy alcohol intake tends to create fat deposits in such unusual areas.

If all abnormalities are eliminated, then you either adjust to it being that way or there is always the possibility of plastic surgery. Skillful surgeons can reduce these fatty deposits considerably and accomplish rather profound changes in appearance.

Address questions to William J. Goldwag, M.D., Copley News Service, in care of the Virginia Beach Sun. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but should not substitute for your own doctor's medical advice.

Virginia Beach Public Notices cont'd.NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC OF PROPOSED RATE CHANGES BY THE CHESAPEAKE AND POTOMAC TELEPHONE COMPANY OF VIRGINIA

Notice is hereby given that on September 28, 1979, The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia filed tariffs with the State Corporation Commission of Virginia which affect the charges customers pay for intrastate long distance service provided by C & P. These tariffs are to become effective on January 1, 1980.

The filed toll changes reprice intrastate toll service and replace toll tariffs which went into effect on March 3, 1979 subject to Commission investigation and hearing. The new tariffs slightly modify the March 3, 1979 tariffs by adding 1¢ to the overtime period rates for intrastate toll calls, 5¢ to the initial period rates for operator assisted and person-to-person intrastate toll calls in certain mileage bands and 10¢ to the initial period rates for person-to-person calls in the 167 to 194 mile range. The Commission has instituted Case Number 20082 to investigate the reasonableness of the toll tariffs filed by C & P.

All tariff material filed by the Company may be reviewed in the Clerk's Office of the Commission and at any Business Office of the Company where bills may be paid as listed in the General Information Section or the Consumer Telephone Guide Section of the telephone directory.

Any formal protest concerning the filed tariffs must be filed with the State Corporation Commission and must comply with the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure. All such protests and any other written communications regarding the filed tariffs must be filed no later than December 15, 1979, should reference Case No. 20082 and be addressed to William C. Young, Clerk, State Corporation Commission, Blanton Building, P.O. Box 1197, Richmond, Virginia 23209.

Opening day brings hunters out in force

By ED LEWIS
Virginia Beach Sun Outdoors Writer

Monday, November 12 was opening day for the rabbit, squirrel and quail season in Tidewater, and hunters were out in force.

M. Vick

Otis Nelson down at the Northwest River Campgrounds told me that M. Vick of Chesapeake killed four squirrels opening morning and was back out of the woods in about two hours.

Otis told me that there were several other hunters in the woods and they had game but he didn't have any names.

Otis also told me that he checked in two deer on Saturday morning and one of those was an eight pointer.

Charley Richardson

Speaking of deer, I talked with Charley Richardson of the U.S. 17 Hunt Club Monday night and he told me that the members of his club had killed 21 deer this past week bringing the season total to 75.

Ammon Tharp

On Wednesday Ammon Tharp of Chesapeake killed a six pointer, Cling Bazemore of Chesapeake killed a four pointer and Buddy Smith of Chesapeake killed a three pointer.

Charley also told me of an unusual occurrence that took place Wednesday morning.

Ervin Williams of Shillagh Rd., Chesapeake, shot a deer and when he went over to cut its throat the deer bit him on the finger and drew blood.

The deer bite

Ervin has been getting ribbed about it a lot and on Saturday morning at the safety talk prior to the hunt, insult was added to the injury.

A new safety regulation was added; Watch out! The deer are biting.

Last week I was telling you about George Spady of Oyster, Va. being one of the better rail hunters on the Eastern Shore, well he has proved himself again.

George took my father, Elton Lewis, marsh henning last Tuesday and the two killed their limit of 30 birds in less than an hour.

George can find rail birds on days when no one else will even try.

Speaking of the Eastern Shore, Virginia State Game Warden Sid Akers (Chesapeake area), Chesapeake Police Detective Dennis Midgett and Dick Titus also of Forcing bulbs for indoor blooming

By PATRICK DENTON

For many years we Beach folks have treated ourselves to the luxury of "forcing" bulbs for early indoor spring bloom. About this time of year we put up our old favorites and a few new ones set them in the cold room and wait for those first shoots to appear any time after Christmas.

Forcing is merely a term applied to the process of making the bulbs bloom ahead of their normal season. Many plants are forced by nurseries, azaleas and hydrangeas, for example, which are pushed ahead of schedule by adjusting temperature, light and moisture.

Many sorts of spring bulbs are suitable for indoor blooming — daffodils, tulips, hyacinths, crocuses, glory-of-the-snow, snowdrops, scilla and grape hyacinth. Certain varieties, though, are better for forcing than others. Bulb catalogs list those which lend themselves best by forcing.

All the bulbs can be potted up at the same time in the fall. Use a five-inch size for a single large hyacinth bulb, or a larger one for a group of three hyacinths. Use sterilized potting soil, setting the bulbs so the tips just show at the soil surface. If you are planting a group of bulbs in one pot, they only have to be spaced a scant inch apart.

Place the flat side of tulip bulbs facing the rim of the pot. The flat side produces the largest leaf, so it is best placed to grow over the edge of the pot.

Once the bulbs are potted, they are placed cold storage. The easiest method is to store them in a dark corner of the basement or garage where the temperature will stay above freezing, by not more than a few degrees.

Keep the soil in the pots slightly damp. Do not let them dry out, and keep them in the dark. Under these conditions the pots should be filled with roots in about six weeks.

About this time you can easily check up on root growth by lifting the ball of soil out of one pot. Once the lower surface of the soil ball is covered with roots, the bulb is ready for forcing.

However, you do not have to remove the pots from cold storage right away. Plants will not make much top growth under these cold, dark conditions. So even if you pot all your bulbs up at the same time, you can still have a succession of blooms by bringing them out of cold storage at different times.

Once roots are formed, bring the pots indoors one or two at a time at two-week intervals. Move them to

Some fishy facts

Many people believe that all it takes to be an expert fisherman is to sound like one. Others insist that you must catch fish.

Here are a few simple facts which you can use to either catch more fish, or to impress friends.

Do fish hear?

Yes, but not the same as most other creatures.

Fish do not have external ears but they do detect sounds and vibrations in water by means of an internal air bladder which transmits sound to an ear chamber.

Also experiments have shown that some fish use their lateral lines to detect vibrations.

Do fish see underwater?

Definitely, —although the vision is limited by the short distance light travels in water.

Do fish shed their scales?

No, scales only grow bigger.

Biologists use the scales to age fish, with rings corresponding to each year of a fish's life.

Do fish drink water?

Not freshwater fish.

They take in water with their food, and also when they force water through the gills to obtain oxygen.

Most of this is probably expelled immediately.

Saltwater fish do drink water, since the high concentration of salt in the water around them tends to cause a loss of natural body fluids.

They pass off excess salt through special cells.

Do fish sleep?

Biologists say yes. Fish do not have eyelids and therefore don't close their eyes, but they do take time out to rest.

Some lie on their sides, others rest against objects, and still others suspend themselves motionless for short periods.

Recipes

For those of you who have loaded your freezers with bluefish, here are a few recipes that were sent to me by the Virginia Institute of Marine Science.

Charcoal grilled bluefish

2 pounds fillets or steaks OR

3 pounds dressed bluefish

1 charcoal grill, any type

30 to 36 charcoal briquets

1 hinged wire hand grill, well-greased

3/4 to 1 cup basting sauce (your own favorite or Spicy Marinade)* 1 basting brush make fir with charcoal briquets. When coals are white hot, spread evenly over bottom of grill.

Wash and dry fish. Cut fish into serving-size portions and place in well-greased, hinged wire hand grill. Baste fish with sauce and place, skin side down, about 4 inches from moderately hot coals. Cook, baste, and turn fish as follows: Fillets or steaks: Cook 5 minutes, baste, turn; Cook 5 minutes, baste, turn; Cook until done, about 15 minutes. Dressed: Cook 8 minutes, baste, turn; Cook 8 minutes, baste, turn; Cook until done, about 20 to 25 minutes.

Fish is done when flesh flakes easily when tested with a fork.

NOTE:

If fire flakes up, remove fish from coals until flames die down, as fire will dry and toughen fish.

Cooking times are approximate: Every fire behaves in a different way, depending on the type of equipment used, wind, air temperature, humidity and fuel. Therefore the cooking times are a guide only.

*If seafood becomes dry, baste more frequently.

Seaside poached bluefish

2 pounds bluefish (or other fish), fillets

1 medium onion, sliced

2 stalks celery, including tops, cut in strips

2 carrots, cut in strips

1/4 teaspoon pepper

2 teaspoons salt

Water, just barely to cover

Put bluefish in single layer in wide shallow pan (such as large fry pan); add vegetables and seasonings; add water to just barely cover. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer slowly just until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork, 5 to 10 minutes. Be careful not to overcook. Remove bluefish from pan and use as desired.

Makes 6 servings as an entree; 4 cups cut-up bluefish for Bluefish Salad Supreme.

Bluefish salad supreme

Poached bluefish, or other fish,

(see Seaside Poached Bluefish)

2 tablespoons finely chopped onion

2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper

1/2 cup salad oil

1/4 cup wine vinegar

1/8 teaspoon garlic powder

2 teaspoons parsley flakes

Salt and pepper to taste

1/4 cup sour cream or mayonnaise

Remove skin and dark layer under skin. Cut bluefish into very small pieces. Put into a bowl and add all ingredients except sour cream; toss gently. Refrigerate until thoroughly chilled. Just before serving, stir in sour cream or mayonnaise.

Makes about 4 cups salad.

Water in gas tanks

While you're getting your stern drive boat ready for winter storage, don't overlook the need to get water out of its gas tank.

Even a small quantity left there for months can corrode the bottom of the tank.

Many boaters prefer to store their stern drive boats with full gas tanks.

The gas is dosed with fuel-stabilizing fluid that slows down the rate of decomposition and thus of gas formation.

It makes sense to keep tanks filled.

Biologists say yes. Fish do not have eyelids and therefore don't close their eyes, but they do take time out to rest.

Some lie on their sides, others rest against objects, and still others suspend themselves motionless for short periods.

vaporize and mix with the air in the tank to form a violently explosive mixture.

A full tank is immune to explosion. It will burn, but it won't blow up violently from some minor spark or flame.

Also, a tank that's full of gas won't let condensation form on its inner surfaces.

Boating authorities nevertheless warn that when a tank is full of gas, a little water in its bottom is shielded from the air and will not evaporate.

It can remain there for a long time and corrode the metal.

As each season draws to a close, watch your fuel filter for signs of an undue amount of water.

Most are simply the common chemical methanol.

Don't forget small boat safety

Many hunters as well as fishermen are taking to the water in small boats now that fall is here.

The Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla 53 of Virginia Beach/Chesapeake advises that most boaters killed or injured in water-related accidents had no intention of going into the water. Hunters and fishermen are urged not to become so absorbed in their sport that they forget boating safety.

Do not stand up or move around in a small boat. It may capsize.

Do not overload your boat with passengers and equipment. Be sure to distribute the load evenly.

Do not decelerate suddenly as the sternwave may overtake and swamp your boat by washing over the transom.

Beach residents try hand at English craft

Brass rubbing catches on

Visitors and residents of Virginia Beach and Tidewater area will have the opportunity of trying their hands at the traditional English craft of brass rubbing through mid-December. For the event, more than thirty English knights and ladies, merchants, lords and priests have arrived in the town. They are some of the 4000 engraved memorial brass figures laid down in English churches during Mediaeval and Tudor times and have been reproduced in exact replica by the London Brass Rubbing Center.

At the exhibition and workshop organized by the group, visitors are provided with paper, waxes and helpful instruction in the craft of brass rubbing, and in half an hour are able to produce for themselves - in the same way as rubbing a coin under paper - a picture of a historic figure from an old English parish church.

Says Richard Etches, a director of the center and currently in America, "Our centers are very much creative workshops for the reproduction of attractive, colorful and original wall hangings - but with a difference. You don't have to be artistic to do this brass rubbing thing. Visitors can, with no previous experience, and just a little help from us, produce their very own pictures by simply rubbing with a wax crayon. I see this as a new vogue that could catch fire in its nationwide appeal. It's both a rewarding and therapeutic pastime and the result, lovely gifts to give to friends and relatives."

The London Brass Rubbing Center, in Virginia Beach, opened November 15 at the Eastern Short Chapel, 2020 Laskin Road. The exhibit and workshop is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sundays, and extends until Saturday, December 15.

The exhibition is free and a charge averaging $3 to $4 is made for all materials and instruction. Royalties from the exhibition go to help maintain and restore the mediaeval English churches housing the original brasses.

Harris to serve as 1980 head of Home Builders

By LIN COOPER

Special to the Virginia Beach Sun

C. Gerald Harris, vice-president of Sicash Builders, Inc., was installed as the 1980 president of Tidewater Builders Association last weekend. The ceremony took place at the annual President's Ball held at the New Cavalier Hotel in Virginia Beach. Second District Congressman G. William Whitehurst performed the installation in the presence of more than 300 invited guests.

In addressing the subject of an uncertain 1980 economy Harris said, "It's going to be a difficult and trying year, but homebuilders are optimistic that we'll be able to continue to provide the consumer with housing to meet his needs."

Referring to his term in office, he continued, "I'm pleased to serve the industry and I know that through our combined efforts we'll weather this uncertainty in the financial market and the industry. And it is in times like these that everyone in the industry particularly needs the strength of the trade association."

Also installed at the President's Ball were Charles F. Jackson, first vice-president; Ramon W. Breedon Jr., second vice-president; H. Jack Jennings, associate vice-president; James S. Leakou, secretary; and Robert A. Lawson Jr., treasurer.

Directors who will serve terms to expire in 1981 are James V. Vickford, William J. Fanney, Doyle E. Hull, William S. Johnson, Richard E. Olivieri, and John H. Peterson.

Nancy L. Clark, Thomas J. Decker, John F. Harris, William J. Hearing, Roger P. Nonni, J.C. Russell, Sr., Frank R. Spadea, and Lyle G. Wermers were installed as directors with terms expiring in 1982.

Tidewater Builders Association, with a current membership of 685 firms, represents the homebuilding industry in the five-city area. The association is a non-profit trade organization affiliated with the Home Builders Association of Virginia and the National Association of Home Builders.

Westminster-Canterbury breaks ground in Virginia Beach

Numerous prospective residents joined with officials of Westminster-Canterbury of Hampton Roads, Inc. November 8 in a mass ground breaking ceremony for the new Westminster-Canterbury House in Virginia Beach. Following a brief ceremony featuring remarks from church, local and state leaders, the residents turned spades of Chesapeake Bay shore sand to begin construction of the life-care facility.

The $24 million facility - which will include a 14-story Residential Unit, a three-story Health Care Center, and a single-story connecting link - will be built on approximately 16 acres on the bay. Basic Construction Company of Newport News, Va., will build the 407,334-sq.-ft. structure.

Guest speakers for the ground breaking ceremony were former Second District Congressman Porter Hardy and Virginia Beach Mayor Patrick L. Standing. The invocation was given by the Rev. Dr. R. Clement Dickey Jr., vice-chairman of the Westminster-Canterbury board of directors and presbytery executive of the Norfolk Presbytery, and Presbyterian Church in the United States; and the benediction was given by the Rt. Rev. C. Charles Vache, chairman of the board and bishop of the Diocese of Southern Virginia, the Episcopal Church. The master of ceremonies was R. Dawson Taylor, board president and president of True Value Home Centers of Virginia Beach.

The Virginia Beach Westminster-Canterbury House is a joint project of the Norfolk Presbytery and the Episcopal Diocese of Southern Virginia. The Rev. Daniel D. Dickenson, D. Min., has been administrator of the project since 1977.

The reinforced concrete and brick facility will contain a maximum of 380 studio, one-bedroom and two-bedroom apartments. The building has been designed to allow various combinations of apartment types according to demand. The Health Care Center will contain 34 beds, for which a Virginia certificate of need was obtained last January, in four private and 15 semi-private rooms. The connecting link and the residential unit's first floor will provide space for lobby areas, administrative offices, dining facilities, community rooms, laundry, social services, recreation areas and the health clinic.

The facility also incorporates a chapel; a library, several recreational and arts and crafts areas, a beauty shop, and lounges and laundry rooms on each residential floor.

Residents of Westminster-Canterbury House pay an initial entrance fee, beginning at $35,200, and a monthly fee to cover operating expenses, beginning at $340, both based on the size of the living unit. In return they receive "complete and secure care for their entire lives," according to Administrator Dickenson.

"The residents should never again have to worry about the cost of health care, including nursing home care, or how to maintain financial security," Dr. Dickenson said. "The services we'll provide, in conjunction with Medicare and private insurance companies, should cover health care needs entirely. And our monthly charges should not rise any faster than the national inflation rate, which will allow residents to fairly accurately project future expenses."

Do you see problems or potential in your environment?

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN

Gary of Virginia Beach is an extraordinarily successful man.

It has not always been that way for him, and what has happened is not happened by accident. He is, in loose terms a troubleshooter for a manager of managers. The impact he has is in the area of effectiveness of management.

Gary operates on the insight that there are two kinds of people in management. There are those whose environment impacts upon them, who adjust to the change and adapt to that environment. The second kind of person is one who causes change. Wherever possible, he is making the changes in his area of influence to achieve his goals. In short, he impacts on his environment.

Let's talk

because he knows he is expected to think positively. But it is all a verbal political game for him. He knows this is basically how he must talk to survive in his job.

"It is here," said Gary, "that I have to look at his actions. How he perceives and reacts to his environment. If the environment is impacting on him, inevitably when you talk to him at length he will point out his many problems and obstacles. The second man will be talking about his goals, opportunities, the potentialities."

He said that he has learned that if he is going to take time to talk to a man, he must spend at least six hours with him in the interview. The interesting thing is that what he tells you in the first hour has no relationship to what he tells you in the sixth hour. The first hour is the

WESTMINSTER-CANTERBURY

"Equally important," he continued, "is the gracious lifestyle we will offer. The community is designed to provide every avenue for a full and rewarding life."

Dr. Dickenson noted a limited amount of fellowship assistance is available to meet the entrance and monthly fees.

Each Westminster-Canterbury apartment includes a full kitchen, but three meals a day will also be served in the central dining room. Special features of the apartments include an emergency call system to alert the staff of medical emergencies, slip-proof bathtubs with assistance bars, scald-proof hot water controls, individual thermostats, sound-proof construction, carpeting and venetian blinds, weekly housekeeping services, furnished linen for the bedroom and bath, lighted parking areas, and security for building and grounds.

Also included with the apartment are most living costs, such as utilities (including local telephone), maintenance, some food costs, heat, and related taxes.

The beds in the Health Care Center are licensed as intermediate and skilled nursing care beds, and the center is designed to allow enlargement if necessary. Recreational, occupational and physical therapy will be offered. Registered nurses will be on continuous duty in the center, and a physician will be on call for medical emergencies. Both the General Hospital of Virginia Beach and Bayside Hospital are located within five miles of Westminster-Canterbury House.

Admission to Westminster-Canterbury House is open to any person or married couple over 65 years old, provided they are ambulatory and in good health at time of admission. There are no religious, racial or church affiliation restrictions. During the construction period, administrative offices will be located at 4700 Thoroughgood Square, Virginia Beach, VA 23455, telephone 460-4434.

The architect for the project is Shriver and Holland Associates of Norfolk. Hankins and Anderson of Richmond is the mechanical and electrical systems architect, and Glenn-Rollins & Associates, Inc. of Norfolk is the structural engineering consultant.

The Virginia Beach Westminster-Canterbury House is expected to be completed in late 1981.

In explaining this to me, he used the analogy of one person seeing a glass as half empty and the other person seeing it as half full. One person sees the problems and the other person sees the opportunities and resources.

Gary said that both men will speak quite positively about business. The first man will speak positively

Packaging saves billions
Over 20 to 40 percent of all agricultural production in the United States could be lost without packaging and modern mechanization.

According to the U.S. Department of Commerce, replacing these losses would cause a $16 billion increase in food costs in America.

Indian Translation of Psalm 23

The Great White Father above is a shepherd chief. I am His, and with Him I want not. He throws out to me a rope and the name of the rope is love, and He draws me to where the grass is green and the water not dangerous, and I eat and lie down satisfied. Sometimes my heart is very weak and falls down, but He lifts it up again and draws me into a good road. His name is Wonderful.

Sometimes . . . it may be very soon; it may be longer; it may be a long time. He will draw me into a place between the mountains. It is dark there, but I'll be afraid not, for it is there between the mountains that the Shepherd Chief will meet me, and the hunger I have left in my heart all through this life will be satisfied.

Sometimes He makes the love rope into whip, but afterwards He gives me a staff to lean on. He spreads a table before me with all kinds of food. He puts His hand upon my head and all the "tired" is gone. My cup He fills till it runs over.

What I tell you is true, I lie not, these roads that are "away ahead" will stay with me through this life, and afterwards I will go to live in the big tape and sit down with the Shepherd Chief forever.

Sons of Union Veterans study Monitor project

The November meeting of the Sons of Union Veterans was held at the Monitor Research and Recovery Foundation. Members studied the Monitor and looked over models, pictures and other artifacts on display at the Monitor office. John B. David, National Representative of the Sons of Union Veterans to the Monitor project, was present.

On December 2 from 3 to 7 p.m. the group will work with the Suffolk Historical Society and the Stonewall Jackson Camp Sons of Confederate Veterans in putting on displays at Riddicks Folley in Suffolk, Va. Riddicks Folley was used as Union

Headquarters during the Civil War. Along with the displays there will be two model Civil War camp sites on the lawn of the home. A number of men will be in both Union and Confederate uniforms. Also other historical houses in the Suffolk area will be open to the general public.

The group voted to be hosts at the Casemate Museum at Fort Monroe, Va. next summer. For this duty they will be dressed in Civil War uniforms.

Any person who would like to join the group may call or write to Duane B. Baldwin 3808 Cumberland Parkway, Virginia Beach, Va. 23452; phone 486-6316.

On a model of the Monitor as it appears today, John B. Davis, right, points out a problem with the raising of the relic to Duane B. Baldwin of Virginia Beach.

Supplementing Medicare coverage

By HARVEY RIDINGER

Field Representative, Social Security Administration, Virginia Beach Area

Medicare covers most major health care costs but it doesn't pay all your medical expenses. For that reason, many private insurance companies sell health insurance policies to supplement Medicare.

If you are thinking of buying private insurance to supplement Medicare protection, we suggest that you closely examine the benefits offered by the policy. Some policies will pay for services which are not covered by Medicare. Some pay the deductibles and other dollar amounts that Medicare does not pay. But others may provide the same coverage you have under Medicare and won't pay any benefits if Medicare does. Make sure you don't buy a policy which is unnecessary or which duplicates your Medicare protection.

Exactly what does Medicare cover?

Medicare hospital insurance covers inpatient hospital care. After a hospital stay, it can also cover inpatient care in a participating skilled nursing facility, and home health services - if you need these kinds of care.

Hospital insurance can help pay for up to 90 days of inpatient care in each benefit period, plus up to 60 additional, non-renewable reserve days if you ever need to be in a hospital for more than 90 days in a benefit period. It can help pay for up to 100 days of care in a participating skilled nursing facility, and it will pay the reasonable cost of up to 100 home health visits.

The medical insurance part of Medicare covers doctors' services, outpatient hospital services, home health visits, and outpatient physical therapy and speech pathology services. It also covers certain ambulance services, limited services by chiropractors, limited home and office services by a licensed physical therapist, and many other services and supplies not covered by hospital insurance.

As a general rule, after you meet the $60 annual deductible, medical insurance will pay 80 percent of the reasonable charges for all covered services you receive in a year.

Medicare does not cover preventive health services, such as regular physical check-ups, or routing dental care, such as filling or removal of teeth. Other services and supplies not covered by Medicare include

Operating room nurses honored at General Hospital of Virginia Beach

In honor of National Operating Room Nurses' Day, November 14, the Department of Surgery at General Hospital of Virginia Beach treated the operating room staff to a special luncheon and cake.

The special day honors the nation's operating room nurses whose role in the operating room was originally that of a maid who was sent to clean the room and mop the sweating brow of early day surgeons. Today's operating room nurses are entering a perioperative role in which they become involved in their patients' individual needs well in advance of the time of surgery and follow their patients' progress after surgery.

At General Hospital of Virginia Beach the emphasis on the O.R. nurses role is being extended past the special day into December. Staff nurses will have one week in December during which they may accompany their patients to the operating room and remain through their operations, an unusual procedure, since unit nurses usually stay on their own units and do not go with patients to surgery.

In addition, the entire hospital staff will have an opportunity to tour one of the operating rooms and talk to O.R. personnel on Dec. 13. On that day, one operating room will be opened to the hospital's staff from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m., so that they will have an opportunity to become better acquainted with the functions of this isolated area of the hospital.

Many employees never enter the O.R. suite during the normal course of their employment. The tours should increase communication between hospital departments, according to Mrs. Ingrid Fox, R.N., assistant director of the surgical suite, P.A.R., and C.S.S. at General Hospital of Virginia Beach.

Becker holds role in Ithaca College drama

Anthony C. Becker of Virginia Beach, an Ithaca College junior in drama, has an important role in the Ithaca College production of "Narrow Road to the Deep North" by Edward Bond. His previous roles have included Ben Ridley in "Mrs. Satan," Tom in the "The Glass Menagerie," George in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" and Hestangus in "A Flea in Her Ear." He is looking forward to a career in drama therapy and experimental theatre.

Becker is the son of Cdr. Roger W. Becker of Spindrift Rd., Bay Island, Virginia Beach

If you are just becoming eligible for Medicare and you already have private health insurance, you may want to get in touch with your insurance agent to discuss your insurance needs in relation to Medicare. Don't cancel any private insurance you have now if you aren't yet eligible for Medicare - especially if you have dependents who are covered under your present policy.

You also should know that no private company or agent selling insurance to supplement Medicare is connected with the Federal Government. Some companies use names, designs, or envelopes that can give the impression they are connected with the Government in some way.

To help Medicare beneficiaries decide whether they need private supplemental insurance, the Health Care Financing Administration has published a pamphlet called "Guide to Health Insurance for People with Medicare." The pamphlet explains what Medicare covers, describes the kinds of private insurance supplements available, and provides useful information to beneficiaries considering the purchase of supplemental insurance. Free copies of the guide are available at social security offices, State Insurance Departments, and many senior citizen's centers.

The Norfolk Social Security Office is located in the Federal Building, Room 600, 200 Granby Mall. The hours are from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and the phone number is 441-3401.

Budget bedroom with tailored look

By BARBARA HARTUNG

Q. I have a small house (one bedroom) at the back of my parent's home near Chesapeake Beach and I am fixing it up. I'm 20 years old and going to school and working so I don't have a lot of money to spend but I do want a clean and tailored look in the little house.

The ceilings are high and there are several high windows. My main concern now is the bedroom which I want to fix up first. Then I'll work on the bathroom, kitchen and living room later in steps.

Please help me with a plan that I can do myself and that won't be too expensive. — H.L.

A. The first thing I'd do is freshen up the walls. A fresh coat of white paint will give you a great background.

To lower your ceilings, why not add a molding around the walls and apply fabric to the lower portion of the walls. Use the same fabric you use for your bed.

Find some sheeting you especially like and buy enough extra flat sheets to apply the fabric to the walls.

A piece of pywood covered with batting and fabric makes a great headboard. Or take any old bed frame and upholster it with your sheeting.

Take one of the colors from your fabric and use it for the carpeting for a soft, luxurious finish to the room.

You might laminate the fabric to window shades for your windows or choose the thin horizontal venetian blinds that give a crisp look to a room.

Add a chair and a desk to your room, and a chest or outfit your closet with built-ins to eliminate the need for chests.

Q. When I bought my rust-colored sofa and lime chairs I thought the color scheme in the back of my mind would work out. Needless to say, it did not.

I need suggestions for colors for curtains, pillows, an area rug to go over the beige wall-to-wall carpeting and wall color. All furnishings are contemporary.

By the way, I am a 23-year-old male so I'd prefer tailored, not frilly things. — J.C.K.

A. Rust and lime are complementary colors and should be able to work very well together. I wonder if what you need is a way of tying the rust and lime together. You could do this with wallpaper or with fabric.

Try to find some really good-looking fabric in rust, lime and beige that you could use for draperies. You could repeat it in pillows.

If there is a companion wallpaper, you could use that in an entry wall if you have one, to establish your color scheme. Or, it is entirely possible that you could find a contemporary area rug in the rust and lime shades.

Beige walls and beige carpeting would be an attractive background for your furniture. Your walls might be a very light beige to give you as much light as possible.

Q. My living room couch and love seat are upholstered in a floral print which has a beige background with orange, brown and darker beige flowers.

My chairs are persimmon velvet. The walls are white and tables

Simple yet attractive bed-sitting room has light gray Anso carpeting combined with tailored bed treatment of two contrasting tiny floral designs in sheeting. Sheetings was also applied to wall under painted dado for chair-rail effect.

Tips for franchise investors

Many people in Virginia Beach who want to "be their own boss" look to franchising as the best way to get started in their own business. Although new Federal Trade Commission (FTC) regulations offer prospective investors much more protection against fraud and misrepresentation than they had in the past, the Better Business Bureau cautions that careful analysis and sound judgment still are the most important factors in choosing a franchise.

Basic questions

The FTC rules, effective on October 21, 1979, cover disclosure of information by companies that sell franchises. It is still up to prospective investors, however, to decide whether a franchise is the right investment to make. They must consider whether owning and operating a business under a franchise agreement with a company fits in with their personal strengths and weaknesses, likes and dislikes. Can they operate a small business and handle the financial risks and responsibilities involved in such a venture? Are they willing to put in long hours of hard work? Will they be comfortable doing the things they will have to do - selling to the public or maintaining a sales outlet, for example?

After answering questions like these, anyone interested in franchising shouldn't have trouble finding a prospective franchiser. There are franchises for many kinds of businesses, and they are listed in several directories available from the government and private organizations.

Required information

When the prospective investor contacts one or more franchise companies, the new FTC rules come into play. At least ten days before a franchise contract is signed or money is paid to the franchise company, the company must provide information about:

- * Costs: What are the start-up costs - fees, deposits, down payments, purchase of equipment and inventory, prepaid rent? Are they refundable if the deal falls through? How about recurring costs - royalties, rent, advertising, equipment and inventory? What training is provided, and at what cost? What are the terms of financing?

- * Operations: Are there limits on what goods or services can be offered, or on the customers to whom they can be offered? Is the territory of the franchise limited, and, if so, are the company's other franchises kept out of the territory? Does the company require or advise the franchisee to do business with any particular companies or individuals, and if so, who are they? Must the franchisee operate the business personally? How long does it usually take to choose a site for the business or build an outlet?

* The company: What is the past business experience, including litigation and bankruptcy, of the company and its top officers and directors? How many franchises are there, and how many of these are company-owned? How many franchises have been terminated during the past year, and why? The company must provide its most recent balance sheet, its three most recent income statements and a list of its franchises that are nearest to the prospective buyer.

* The contract: How long does it last, and how can it be renewed or terminated? Can the franchise be repurchased by the company or sold by the franchisee? What rights do the franchisee's heirs have? How can the contract be changed after it is signed?

If the company provides projections of sales or earnings for a franchise, either in general terms or in relation to the specific franchise being offered, the FTC requires that the company have a reasonable basis for making the projections and supply this information on request. Also, it must disclose the number and percentage of outlets that do as well as the projections indicate.

An equal mix

Prospective franchise buyers should regard the FTC-required disclosures as a good starting point - but no more than that - in evaluating a franchise offer. An attorney should look over the contract and advise on how suitable it is in terms of the investor's interests. An accountant should examine the financial statements, especially to make sure the company substitute for talking directly with current franchisees to find out what operating the franchise really is like and how well the company delivers on its promises. The FTC rules require the franchisor to provide names and addresses of existing area franchisees.

facade, the cover-up, the front. The last hour is usually very close to where he really is as an authentic person if he has had real listening during this time.

Gary says a successful person is a self-centered person, a selfish person, and his selfishness may include his family. But he has a deep sense of his own worth, and realizes that loyalty to a company is stupidity.

My immediate response was that loyalty is considered a virtue in our culture. Gary considered this for a moment and then asked me the question: "What are you loyal to in a company - bricks and mortar, stockholders you have never seen? Fact the fact that it is a form of security, a form of mother's love. The secure person does not need that."

"If a man says to me," continued Gary, "that he is loyal to his company, what he is really telling me is that he really doesn't love himself very much. If a man says that he is dedicated to his growth, and his potential, and he is self-centered enough and concerned enough about his own well-being, I know that the man will make the company grow for his own purposes."

Part of Gary's job this week is to fly to Boston and fire a manager. I asked him about his feelings about this. "Of course, it bothers me," he answered. "But the way I am going to fire that man is to make him hate me - to put something so repulsive of myself inside of him that he will go out, get a job, and do it just to prove that I was wrong in firing him. I am going to tell him that I will help him get any job he wants except the kind of job he has. This is the kind of job which is not for him."

I asked Gary how he measured success. His answer was, "Unless you have been a monumental failure in life, you cannot measure success." If you have been at the point of real despair, then you can be sensitive to what achieving is and what success is all about.

He ended by saying that he knows he is a very successful man now, but that he has not arrived by any means at the limit of his potential. What can ruin it all for him is intoxication of power because he knows he could become very power hungry.

As he left my office, he added one more sentence, "That's why I need the church every Sunday."

Bulb planting day

Linkhorn Park Garden Club has chosen "Garden Therapy" this year as its HANDS Project. HANDS is a community conservation and beautification program sponsored by the Council of Garden Clubs of Virginia Beach and the Sears Community Improvement Fund.

Club members were at the Center for Effective Learning, 233 N. Witchduck Road, Virginia Beach, on Thursday, November 15, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., to help the students plant daffodil bulbs.

The club prepared a large flower bed on the grounds of the school, and purchased 330 yellow daffodil bulbs to be planted by the children. Each child plants a bulb in the fall and is able to see it grow and bloom in the spring. This project will only beautify the school grounds, but also promotes self-confidence for the handicapped child.

During the autumn of the year, all across Virginia Beach you see backyard gardeners intensely studying plants of all types wherever they are sold. For this is the time of year when one tends to spot new places indoors where a plant would be just the thing to finish off the decor of a room.

By PATRICK DENTON

But in order to give each plant a spot in which it will thrive, and to supply it with the correct care, it's a good idea to have on hand a good book on house plant care. Both Ortho and Sunset put out good complete magazine-format houseplant books.

It's important to select in the first place only healthy plants, insect-free, with obvious new and flourishing growth. Then, keep any new addition to your houseplant collection in isolation for two weeks before you place it with your established plants, just in case some catching disorder manifests itself.

Major aspects of houseplant care to consider are watering, feeding and light exposure. If a houseplant is not receiving its proper care it usually gives some indication of its need. For example, if leaf edges turn brown or when new growth withers, usually the plant is placed in too high a heat and lacks moisture and/or humidity. It is telling you it needs a cooler spot, regular watering and an increase in humidity.

In our centrally heated homes during the cold weather, the air can tend to be very dry. It pays to mist your humidity-loving plants daily, and to set pots in containers holding wet pebbles. Also, grouping these plants together helps maintain humidity.

Watering the roots and leaves with cold water will usually produce white or yellowish rings on the foliage.

Always use water at room temperature to moisten the soil. If some drops of water do get on the foliage, be sure they are not left in the sun.

If a flowering indoor plant fails to produce any blossoms, chances are it needs more light, moisture and humidity, and perhaps less fertilizer. Provide more light by moving it to a brighter window or closer to a fluorescent light. Take care to keep soil evenly moist and increase humidity. Fertilize less and avoid plant food with a high nitrogen content during the normal blooming period for the plant.

Many indoor gardeners are thrilled when their plants set out nice fat flower buds, but then to their disappointment the plant begins to drop the buds before they can open into bloom. Again, the problem often is too high a temperature, or drafts, or temperature changes. The plant likely needs a much higher humidity. Most plants in bud benefit from a misting twice daily.

If the stems on a plant turn mushy and decay, or the leaves wilt, it usually means the plant is being drowned with water. Check first that the soil drains well. Begonias, gloxinias, geraniums and African violets especially suffer from being planted in heavy, waterlogged soil.

Acid-loving plants like azaleas, citrus and camellias will indicate their need for greater acidity by sending out new foliage growth that is yellow. Foliage will return to a proper color with applications of one ounce iron sulphate dissolved in two gallons of water. Keep using the solution until the green is restored to the leaf color.

If some lower leaves on a plant yellow and drop off, it could be the plant is just getting old. Or perhaps these leaves have matured and should be clipped off. For geraniums, give more fresh air.

Keeping regular

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY

Registered Dietitian

Constipation has many causes and almost no one escapes it entirely, at one time or another during a lifetime.

Changes in the diet with geographical relocation account for the typical traveler's plight. New foods, water and customs of a different country often produce temporary, but unpleasant problems.

Depending upon which countries are visited, and the excellence of the sanitation laws, many foreign visitors experience either the "Montezuma's Revenge" type of upset, or an annoying constipation. Visitors to the United States find the adjustment to our country just as disturbing as American travelers abroad.

It is a human problem that must be dealt with individually. The traveler's distress, however, is usually short-lived, as adjustments to new surroundings take place.

Packing some pure bran, mild laxative tablets or a few dried prunes along with an anti-diarrhea medication in every traveler's bag can save a lot of misery in a foreign country. Consider the problem of the poor guy trying to explain these needs in a place where he can't speak the language.

People who suffer chronic constipation at home often have a more serious situation. Some folks seem to have been "born that way" and indeed there are, to borrow a psychological term, "retentive-type" personalities. Certainly, mental attitudes have significant effects on physical well-being. Hostile, angry and tense individuals often suffer from constipation, which in turn tends to heighten their hostility.

What effect will changes in the diet bring about? Depending upon what the habitual foods have been taken - a soft, bland diet with little or limited fluids, low fiber, high fat, sugary foods along with sedentary occupations may account for a sluggish intestinal tract. Excessive amounts of vitamin D can cause a loss of appetite and constipation - which may surprise some people who erroneously think that there is no such thing as a vitamin overdose.

One of the most effective ways of correcting constipation problems is to add a lot of water to the diet. A quart a day should be the minimal amount taken in addition to the regular beverages, and more if possible.

Fiber, as it is currently called, rather than the former term, bulk or roughage, can easily be added to any diet. The simplest way is to sprinkle one to two tablespoons of pure bran, over other foods - preferably salads of fresh fruits and vegetables. Whole grain breads, cereals, nuts and pectin are effective aids and sources of dietary fiber.

Regular exercise on a daily basis puts every aspect of the body in better condition. It is more effective to exercise every day, even for a few minutes, than being an occasional "week-end athlete."

Many people have reported greater mental tranquility, and even emotional "highs" after establishing a regular routine of daily exercise for themselves.

This is particularly effective for the tense, nervous, or hostile personality with retentive constipation problems.

Dependence upon laxative medications seems to grow with continual use. Chronic constipation may require medical care and should not be ignored. It can be symptomatic of serious problems.

Try these easy changes in your lifestyle first, and you may be able to forestall future difficulties.

Dear Shirley: What do you think of non-dairy creamers instead of cream in coffee? — D.M.

Dear Mrs. D.M.: If you are trying to lower the saturated fat in your diet, that is not the way to do it. Non-dairy creamers contain coconut oil, which is saturated fat. They can be used for people with milk allergies or those who have a lactose intolerance to milk.

Sound barrier needed to block noise from Beach expressway

By GENE GARY

Q. Can you offer a suggestion as to how to combat noise along the interstate? We live near the Virginia Beach - Norfolk Expressway. We have tried bamboo-type shade which set down at the side of the patio, but no good. What shrubs help? — Mrs. R.A.

A. Adequate sound barriers are needed to reduce transmission of outdoor noises into a house. Some effect will result from solid fences of suitable height, particularly fences of stone or brick. Thick, dense hedges also have some effect.

However, the best barriers to stop noise from entering through windows are storm sashes, installed tightly with felt strips at the edges, double-glass windows, felt weatherstripping for all windows and heavy drapes.

Q. In our bathroom we have faucets called "bathroom jewelry." One is of antique gold color and has developed a green deposit. The other is a pewter finish and has a whitish water settles. I am afraid to use the ordinary cleaner for fear it might be too harsh. Do you have any suggestions? — Mrs. V.L.

A. Try washing the faucets with white vinegar, mixed with as much salt as will dissolve. If the deposits are caused from hard water, often a paste of kerosene and scratchless cleanser will work. The discoloration can often be removed by wiping the surface with household ammonia. Dilute this half and half with water. As much of the plumbing and cleaning problems in your area are due to hard water, a water softener helps.

Q. Our problem is a strange one. We put a plastic-type dresser scarf or runner on both our solid oak dressers. Well, to our amazement, the runners stuck and left a bumpy surface.

Evidently, some type of "waxy" stuff was on the back of the runners and is all over the top of the dressers. We haven't dared try to get it off, except to use lemon oil, without results.

We realize it may need a solvent of some kind, but that might mean a refinishing job of the top surface and one could never match the stain. I'm sure. Please help. — Mrs. Ed. M.C.E.

A. A plastic film, often from tablecloths, doilies, runners or placemats, may cling to wood under certain conditions of heat, humidity and pressure.

If the wood is well finished, you may be able to remove the film with a dry, soapy-filled steel wool pad, rubbed very gently over the affected area.

If this doesn't work, try liquid sandpaper, but use with caution, going over the surface very lightly.

If neither of these work, the only other remedy I know is a refinishing job.

Q. Since taking a wood-refinishing class, I have started stripping things in my house and keeping them natural. One was my fireplace mantel but now the brick and flagstone hearth look very dingy.

How can I get them back into shape? I have heard you use muratic acid, but do not know how to dilute it. Would appreciate any help you can give me. — Mae H.

A. Muratic acid is used mostly to remove mortar or cement splashes from brick, but it is difficult to use inside the house and I doubt that is what you need for cleaning your fireplace brick and flagstone. If used, the dilution is one part muratic acid to nine parts of water. This is a dangerous acid, so be sure to use rubber gloves, wear goggles and use care.

Another cleaning solution for masonry consists of trisodium phosphate, one cup to one gallon of water. There are also good commercial cleaning products for masonry on the market.

When the brick and flagstone are cleaned, a good sealer will improve the appearance. Consult your local paint store or masonry supply dealer for a good sealer.

Q. I want to know how to remove the cement residue after I have taken off plastic tile halfway up the wall of my kitchen and bathroom. I want to recover the whole wall. —

The constant roar of traffic on the Virginia Beach - Norfolk Expressway can be distracting to nearby homeowners. Stone or brick fences, dense hedges, and insulated windows and drapes can serve as sound barriers.

Amy N.

A. If possible, find out what specific cement or adhesive was used in installing the plastic tile and the solvent recommended by the manufacturer for that adhesive. Solvents vary according to the particular cement.

Otherwise try steel wooling off with naphtha, or better yet, sand it off with an electric sander, since you are going to recover the wall anyway.

Questions on building, home maintenance and repair may be sent to Here's How, in care of the Virginia Beach Sun.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC OF VIRGINIA STATE CORPORATION COMMISSION'S INVESTIGATION TO DETERMINE TARIFFS FOR RECOVERY OF FUEL COSTS BY VIRGINIA ELECTRIC AND POWER COMPANY

The Virginia State Corporation Commission ("Commission"), pursuant to §56-249.6 of the Code of Virginia, has required each privately-owned electric utility in Virginia to submit its estimate of fuel costs, including the fuel component of purchased power, for the one-year period beginning January 1, 1980 along with any over or under recovery of fuel costs for the preceding year.

On or before November 20, 1979, Vepco ("Company") will file with the Commission its estimated fuel costs, tariff revisions to recover such estimated fuel costs and evidence in support thereof. On and after November 20, 1979, copies of the testimony and tariffs may be reviewed during regular business hours in any Company office where bills may be paid, or in the Office of the Clerk of the Commission, 12th Floor, Blanton Building, Bank and Governor Streets, Richmond, Virginia.

A public hearing has been scheduled at 10:00 a.m., December 13, 1979, in the Commission's 13th Floor Courtroom, Blanton Building, Bank and Governor Streets, Richmond, Virginia.

Any interested person (public witness) who wishes to appear and make a statement in his or her own behalf need only appear in the Courtroom at 9:45 a.m. on the day of the hearing. Public witnesses will be given an opportunity to speak at 10:00 a.m., or as soon as practicable thereafter.

On or before December 7, 1979, any interested person desiring to participate as a protestant, as defined in Rule 4:6 of the Com-sion's Rules of Practice and Procedure ("SCC Rules"), to present evidence and to cross-examine witnesses, must file with the Clerk of the Commission an original and five copies of a protest as described in SCC Rule 5:16(b) together with an original and ten copies of the testimony and exhibits protestant intends to present at the December hearings. A copy of each protest and prefilled testimony and exhibits must be served upon the respondents herein as follows:

Vepco—Evans Brasfield, Esquire, Hunton & Williams, P. O. Box 1535, Richmond, Virginia 23212

Potomac Edison—Philip J. Bray, Esquire, Downsville Pike, Hagerstown, Maryland 21740

Appalachian Power—John L. Walker, Jr., Esquire, Woods, Rogers, Muse, Walker & Thornton, P. O. Box 720, Roanoke, Virginia 24004

Delmarva Power—John W. T. Webb, Esquire, Webb, Burnett & DuVall, 11 South Broad Street, Salisbury, Maryland 21801

Potomac Electric—Allen C. Barringer, Esquire, 1900 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D. C. 20006

Dominion Power—John W. Riely, Esquire, Hunton & Williams, P. O. Box 1535, Richmond, Virginia 23212

All written comments to the Commission regarding this proceeding should be addressed to William C. Young, Clerk, State Corporation Commission, P. O. Box 1197, Richmond, Virginia 23209.

NOTICE OF HEARING ON VEPCO'S PROPOSAL TO ADJUST ITS RATES WHEN NORTH ANNA UNIT NO. 2 COMMENCES COMMERCIAL OPERATION

At the conclusion of the hearing on Virginia Electric and Power Company's fuel costs for 1980 a hearing will then begin on Vepco's proposal to adjust its rates when North Anna Unit No. 2 commences commercial operation.

Vepco has filed an application, together with the proposed testimony of witnesses it expects to present, to increase its rates when its second unit at its North Anna generating plant begins commercial operation. The proposed change in rates is designed to produce additional annual revenue of approximately $46.0 million and would not become effective until North Anna Unit No. 2 commences commercial operation.

Vepco's application, proposed tariff change, and supporting testimony and exhibits may be reviewed in any company office where customer bills may be paid.

The hearing on this proposed change in rates will be limited to the need for the proposed change in rates because of the operation of North Anna Unit No. 2.

Interested persons, not intending to appear as a protestant, who desire to appear before the Commission and speak in their own behalf, either for or against the application, should notify the Clerk of the Commission in writing on or before December 7, 1979.

All interested persons who desire to appear before the Commission at the hearing as a protestant shall file with the Clerk of the Commission on or before December 7, 1979, a protest setting forth their interest in this hearing, the nature of the testimony of the witness or witnesses they expect to present, and the nature of the relief sought.

Provisions of the new Bankruptcy Act

By JUDITH G. RHOADES

Q. We own a small business in Virginia Beach, and the last few months our income has dwindled to almost nothing.

I want to reorganize the company, but I am afraid the hassle would be terrible, so I had almost decided to close the doors, when I read about a new bankruptcy law that might help me. Can you give me any information on the new law, and also how to go about reorganizing? — Name withheld upon request.

A. I am sorry, but I am not qualified to give you specific legal advice, so in order to have your question properly answered do go talk with a lawyer.

I can tell you, however, that the new Bankruptcy Reform Act which went into effect Oct. 1 of this year has made substantial changes from the previous law.

Most important for you is that the new law will provide people who own a small business, as you do, an effective way in which to reorganize your company without a lot of disruption in your business. The new law will increase the possibility that all the assets of persons contemplating bankruptcy may be protected in the bankruptcy proceeding, allowing the debtor to discharge his liabilities while maintaining control and ownership over his property.

A new federal exemption will allow the debtor to exempt $7,500 in cash as well as all the other exemptions permitted by law. Husband and wife bankrupts will be allowed to take exemptions under both the federal and state laws.

Most of the changes which were made in the exemption category will be to the benefit of the debtor.

Q. In an Individual Retirement Account Plan (IRA), is the use of an annuity contract the only method I can use to insure my beneficiaries can avoid paying an estate tax on my retirement plan after my death?

A. No it isn't. If you make a choice to receive trust payments from whatever form of IRA you have over three or more years, that will keep IRA funds out of the estate, according to the Internal Revenue Code, Section 2039(e), and Income Tax Regulations 1.2039-5(b).

Sometimes it will be possible with a payment period spread over two years, and in some instances, a single lump-sum payment will be sufficient for qualified plans. (IRC 2039 (c) and 2039 (D).)

One of the problems with the IRA retirement plans today is that the person who is drafting the plan has not looked at the tax consequences which might come into effect 20 years in the future. For instance, no beneficiary was selected and the person who is benefiting from the plan dies. That beneficiary of the plan will have to pay estate and gift taxes because the drafter did not indicate the proper election to make in order to avoid them.

The beneficiary of your retirement plan should be a defined person, your spouse, or your child for example, not your estate. (Although estate and gift taxes are separate taxes, the rules do overlap and are comparable, so in essence they dovetail.) If your beneficiary does choose a 36-month payout, whatever assets are coming in that period are not subject to gift tax.

Judith Rhoades is a free-lance writer who has spent 15 years in the securities industry. If you have any questions regarding finance, securities or the stock market, you may address them to her in care of the Virginia Beach Sun.

The information regarding retirement plans was supplied by the Legal Department of ADP Pension Services, Clifton, N.J. and Glen Belka, Associate Vice President of Pension Services, American Home Mortgage, Newport Beach, Calif.

Beach Reading Council workshop

Thursday evening, November 29, the Virginia Beach Reading Council is sponsoring a one-hour workshop at Plaza Junior High. Those attending may choose to hear either of two speakers.

Dr. Katherine Kersey, professor of early childhood education at O.D.U., will speak on the topic, "Classroom Management."

The second workshop will be given by Ted Forte, director of staff development for the Norfolk Public Schools. His topic will be "Making Learning Worthwhile."

Members and nonmembers alike are invited to attend the workshop, which will begin at 7:30.

Winter quarter registration taking place at TCC

Director of Continuing Education, Tidewater Community College, Beach campus

We have just received the schedule of classes for the winter quarter on the Virginia Beach campus of Tidewater Community College. Registration began this week and will continue through December 20 and will be held again on January 2. Classes begin on the third.

In order to best serve the needs of the community, we also are offering four special registrations for courses offered at off-campus locations. For courses on the Naval Air Station, Oceana, prospective students may register on Dec. 3 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the Navy Campus for Achievement Office. At the U.S. Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek, registration will take place on Dec. 4 from 3:30 - 5 p.m. in Building 3504, room 173.

Off-campus registration also will take place at Kempsville Junior High School on Dec. 11 from 5 - 7 p.m. and at Lynnhaven Junior High School on Dec. 13 from 5 - 7 p.m.

Copies of the winter quarter schedule are available on the Beach campus from the Admissions and Records Office, Building A, or through the mail by calling that office at 427-3070, ext. 234.

In the winter quarter, we are offering many of our regular courses covering the first two years of university parallel-college transfer instruction. Of course we also are continuing to offer our occupational and technical programs, such as respiratory therapy and secretarial science.

We also are offering a couple of new programs this winter. For instance, the complete Early Childhood Instruction program now is available on the Virginia Beach campus for the first time. The three-quarter program leads to a certificate in early childhood instruction. The courses are designed for those presently employed as educational aides and those who may be seeking careers in this field. Many of the courses already are scheduled into the winter quarter and anyone wishing to join the program now can be accommodated. They should contact the Humanities Division on the Beach campus.

An interesting and unusual history course is being offered this quarter by our Division of Social Sciences. Women's World History II will focus upon the role of women in American society and will include discussion of minority women, women in colonial and frontier societies, in industrialized America and in politics. The course will be taught by Helena Mast, associate professor of history. She also is being instrumental in forming an organization for the returning woman student, Delta Sigma Lambda.

At Tidewater Community College, 53 percent of our students are women. We always try to design our programs to meet the educational needs of area citizens. Any person who has a high school diploma or the equivalent, or who is 18 years of age and in any case is able to benefit from a program at the college may be admitted to the college. A high school diploma is not required.

Army private discovers formula for success in intelligence field

"I had heard that the Intelligence School at Ft. Devens was one of the toughest in the Army. I volunteered for the school, and I came here determined to be one of the best."

Army Private Jeanne Marie Palo, daughter of Alex Palo Sr. of Virginia Beach, recently graduated from OSH (Electronic Warfare/Cryptologic Intercept-Morse) training with the highest average ever achieved at the U.S. Army Intelligence School, Ft. Devens, (USAISD).

Palo came to USAISD with absolutely no background in Morse Code or intelligence specialties. Her previous training had been in patient administration at Ft. Sam Houston, Tx. She completed that course as "distinguished graduate" also. When she finished her training, though, Palo found there were no vacancies in the field.

"I was given the chance to transfer to another specialty," she says, "so I chose the intelligence field. It sounded pretty exciting, and from what I had been told, it would be quite a challenge for me."

EW/Crypto training proved to be every bit as difficult as Palo had been told. "Things looked pretty grim for a while," she says. "I got stuck on one code speed and thought I'd never get past it. But I kept telling myself, 'Don't give up.' And I didn't."

Palo doesn't feel she's really that special, though. "Anyone can do the same thing I did," she says. "All it takes is the determination to succeed. You have to set a goal for yourself and always keep that goal in mind. It's not that much effort. It's really a simple matter of keeping your mind on where you're going."

Palo's time in the Army has been one of sheer optimism. She entered basic training and "loved it." She attended the "patient administration's" course at Ft. Sam Houston, and came out the distinguished graduate. And now, she has taken Ft. Devens and the intelligence school by storm.

"I didn't know I was going to be the distinguished graduate from the OSH course, but I'm glad I was. It makes the effort worthwhile."

She doesn't see this success as the culmination of her efforts, though. Palo has plans, later in her career, "after six to eight years in the field", to try for Officer Candidate School. "I want to make intelligence my career," she says.

Private Palo is now on her way to Field Station Augsburg, Germany, for a three-year tour.

Oman is president of the Virginia State Licensing and Regulatory Board of Funeral Directing and Embalming and he is a member of the National Conference of Funeral Service Examining Boards of the United States.

The program will conclude a series of discussions at the church based on the subject of "Death and Dying." Mrs. Elsie Thornberry is in charge of the program.

Need exists for a strong self-concept

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN

A standard technique in psychotherapy is to treat certain types of neurotic problems by gradually withdrawing psychic support. This is to force the patient to develop ego strength, and emotionally, eventually stand on his or her own.

We become weak by being a highly dependent person. One can be dependent on a parent and later a spouse, and the development of the whole personality can never take place.

Withdrawal of the support generally can force people to use their own resources, to rethink and develop their own strong "self-concept" and then they start to grow.

The assumption of this style of treatment is that at the core of every neurotic person there is some basic self-esteem which can be fanned into life and growth. This is the twig of the new beginning.

But suppose support is gradually withdrawn from a neurotic person and a probe is made for that one spark of self-esteem, and then the horrible discovery is made that there is nothing left at the center of the person's self-hood? Withdrawal therapy is helpless in the face of this kind of life tragedy.

True, there are not too many people who think that lowly of themselves, but when such a situation comes along, only an unshakable creed can provide any reassurance of self-worth. People may search for love to reaffirm their worth and they may be rebuffed again and again, betrayed and frustrated. Or they may experience years of being "beaten down," and have all of their self-confidence destroyed. At the moment of total and utter despair, only the basic definition of the human personality can provide any hope of renewal.

It is that God, in His very creation of mortals, gives to us love and nurture. So it is that each person is endowed with the shadow of God's essence. No matter what else may happen, no matter what crimes such a person may commit, no matter what despair he or she may fall into, God's fundamental love remains.

It has been the basic point of theology that God's love does not hinge on self-worth. Carl Barth has pointed out to churchmen of the world that God does not care if a man is good or proud or successful or just satisfactory. It was Paul Tillich who told us that the essence of human life includes God's love, and is the very ground of our being.

So many lives are changed by a word of confidence. So many young people are redirected by a reassurance of hope. An expression of life and enthusiastic appreciation is like watering a parched plant. The person receiving that love responds with a new zest and power that can seemingly come from no place else.

Almost all of us are constantly looking for reassurance - laying little snares to get it, directing conversation to the recognition of our gifts. But the very act of giving reassurance to another buoys up one's own spirit. To have taken part in the expression of God's love is a noble experience every one of us can have often.

Through the years we find ourselves, not by looking all around for the answer and technique and achievement, but in taking part in the search of others. We reach out to others, and we are helped.

The other side of that coin is that the sickest people I know are so often those whose lives have finally been reduced to the overwhelming concern for themselves. The healthy people are those who are so utterly engrossed in the discovery of good in others that they have forgotten about themselves.

Sheltered Workshop seeks donations for auction, flea market

Plans for a combined auction, flea market and garage sale on December 8 have been launched by the fund-raising committee of the Virginia Beach sheltered workshop. Located at 3432 Virginia Beach Boulevard, across from Princess Anne Plaza Shopping Center, this non-profit organization provides training and employment for handicapped citizens of Virginia Beach.

Proceeds from the auction/sale will go toward the purchase of shop equipment such as lathes, presses, table saws, a fork lift truck, assembly and stock handling machinery. Approximately $20,000 is necessary to obtain the needed equipment and it is this figure that the committee has set as a goal for this fund raising venture.

Donations of new and used items from businesses and individuals are being received daily to be sold at the flea market from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. or at the 1:30 p.m. auction. Items may be dropped off at the workshop; bulky items will be picked up by calling the workshop number, 486-4428 or 4432.

Boats, cars, antiques, motorcycles, furniture, clothes, toys and treasures of many types are among the items to be sold and auctioned. Refreshments will be available and entertainment will be provided by the Peninsula Community Band.

Indian Translation of Psalm 23

The Great White Father above is a shepherd chief. I am His, and with Him I want not. He throws out to me a rope and the name of the rope is love, and He draws me to where the grass is green and the water not dangerous, and I eat and lie down satisfied. Sometimes my heart is very weak and falls down, but He lifts it up again and draws me into a good road. His name is Wonderful.

Sometimes . . . it may be very soon; it may be longer; it may be a long time. He will draw me into a place between the mountains. It is dark there, but I'll be afraid not, for it is there between the mountains that the Shepherd Chief will meet me, and the hunger I have left in my heart all through this He will be satisfied.

Sometimes He makes the love rope into whip, but afterwards He gives me a staff to lean on. He spreads a table before me with all kinds of food. He puts His hand upon my head and all the "lions" are gone. My cup He fills till it runs over.

What I tell you is true, I lie not, these roads that are "away ahead" will stay with me through this life, and afterwards I will go to live in the big toes and sit down with the Shepherd Chief forever.

Social Security is insurance

By HARVEY RIDINGER

Field Representative, Social Security Administration - Virginia Beach Area

One of the questions people sometimes ask us is why doesn't social security work like commercial insurance?

Sometimes the question refers to the fact that commercial insurance companies are required by law to have sufficient reserves so that they can meet all their future obligations even if no new policies are sold.

Or the questions may come from somebody who is wondering why social security does not provide a specified return on "premiums" or private annuities do.

The answer to both questions is based on the fact that social security simply isn't the same as commercial insurance; even though the system has many of the characteristics of private insurance programs.

Social security programs here and in other countries generally are referred to as "social insurance" because they are sponsored by the government for society as a whole. They are designed to prevent widespread poverty in the society by assuring families a continuing income when certain events occur. Old age, death, and disability are the most common events covered.

But let's get to specific differences between social security and commercial insurance, starting with financing.

Because a private insurance company is not assured of new customers, it is required to maintain sufficient assets on hand to pay all benefits as they fall due.

Social security, however, is mandatory for most workers. It is therefore assured of new participants and does not need to maintain huge reserves to meet its future obligations.

Thus social security benefits are financed primarily from current payroll taxes. The system is considered financially sound when anticipated taxes are sufficient to pay anticipated benefits for future years.

The trust funds contain a contingent reserve sufficient to pay benefits for several months should there be a shortfall in income.

Moreover, if the system were to maintain reserves to pay all obligations presently incurred it would impact severely on the economy.

Investing such huge funds in private businesses would lead to Government ownership of many of the Nation's corporations.

The second question refers to the social security benefits structure and how benefits are paid.

Like all insurance plans, social security is based on the idea of participants pooling their resources to share the cost of certain risks.

But unlike private companies, social security is primarily designed to protect the society as a whole, with individual equity a strong consideration.

Beach Police Department launches Auxiliary Police recruitment campaign

The Virginia Beach Police Department is currently accepting applications for individuals interested in becoming Auxiliary Police Officers. The Auxiliary Police are a volunteer unit of this department. Individuals accepted will be required to attend the Auxiliary Police Academy. Requirements for the position, in part, are:

Must be between 21 and 45, a resident of the City of Virginia Beach, a United States Citizen, and a high school graduate or possess the equivalent G.E.D.

For additional information, contact the Auxiliary Administrative Coordinator at 427-4146 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Your number's up

Thus, social security does not provide a specified return on a person's taxes, to be paid regardless of whether a person suffers the risk insured against.

But it does provide inflation-proof benefits related to past earnings. When benefits are figures, past earnings are adjusted to reflect increases in average wages over a person's working life. Once a person starts receiving benefits, they are adjusted for increases in the cost of living.

Moreover, people continue to receive the benefits as long as they meet the requirements in the law. This means that many workers and their families may receive much more than the worker paid in social security taxes.

Social security provides every worker protection against the loss or reduction of income if he or she retires, becomes disabled, or dies. It also includes health insurance for people 65 and over, those with prolonged disabilities, and those with permanent kidney failure.

More than 35 million workers and their dependents and survivors of deceased workers are currently receiving benefits that represent their primary source of income in many cases.

Social security provides a base of income protection on which a person may build to suit his or her personal life style and needs.

Commercial insurance, or other forms of investment income, enable most people to supplement their social security to meet their individual needs.

Social security provides a floor, while commercial insurance becomes part of the ceiling in the structure of financial security most workers attempt to build for themselves and their families.

The Norfolk Social Security Office is located in the Federal Building, Room 600, 200 Granby Mall. The hours are from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The phone number is 441-3401.

The November 7 edition of the Virginia Beach Sun incorrectly listed the names of two coordinators responsible for a workshop held at King's Grant Elementary School to make extra language arts teaching materials which the teachers use to supplement classroom textbooks.

The two coordinators responsible for the program were Miss Nikki Galantis and Miss Ann McNamara, not the school principal and the librarian.

Mrs. Betty nBlankenship is the president of King's Grant P.T.A., not the chairwoman of the group.

Chilling thriller opens this weekend at Little Theatre of Virginia Beach

The chilling melodrama "Angel Street," by Patrick Hamilton, opens at the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach on Friday, November 30 at 8:30 p.m. and will continue on Fridays and Saturday evenings through December 15 with a matinee performance on Sunday, Dec. 9 at 3 p.m.

"Angel Street," which was first presented under the title "Gas Light" by Gardner Davies on Dec. 5, 1938 in London, is one of those good old Victorian thrillers common to the theater 30 or 40 years ago. This one is an especially well-written melodrama.

'Kinetic Light Sculpture exhibit combines arts and technology

An unusual exhibition that combines art and technology is on display at the Virginia Beach Arts Center through December, entitled Kinetic Light Sculpture by New Yorker Claudio Marzollo. The work of the Italian-born artist uses motors, lights, and gel to produce glowing, intense colors that pulsate and change in infinite patterns. Marzollo shows in Europe as well as the United States, and has been included in group exhibitions such as "Pulse Plus Process" in Toronto. His sculpture is in the permanent collections of Marshall McLuhan and Cesare Siepi, among others.

Photographic prints dealing with light and texture have also been combined into a portfolio by eleven southeastern Virginia artists. The Friends of Photography. The prints will be shown in the hall galleries at the Arts Center and are available for sale.

The reception for these exhibitions will be December 9, from 12:55. At the same time, the Arts Center will present the Unicorn Marketplace—a late blooming crafts for Christmas experience. It is planned as a Christmas present to the community from the center and the craftsmen. Gingerbread and mulled wine will be served, as well as Christmas cookies. Artists will demonstrate their skills, and there will be activities visitors can take part in.

Joe Frazier to fight at Beach Dome

Former heavyweight boxing champion of the world Joe Frazier will fight a three round exhibition at the Virginia Beach Dome this Thursday, November 29, as part of the first fight card to be promoted by Main Event, Inc., in Virginia Beach.

Local heavyweight Brad Crane will take on "Smokin' Joe" for the exhibition. Local boxer Bobby Acey had to cancel a planned bout due to kidney problems. However, Alfonso Haymen, who triumphed over Acey in Virginia Beach several months ago, will again headline the card. Six bouts will be held along with the Frazier vs. Crane exhibition.

Tickets are on sale at the Dome box office for $10, $8 and $6. The show will start at 8 p.m.

Outdoor sculpture competition to be conducted at Beach

Applications for the Virginia Beach Outdoor Sculpture Competition are available now through the Virginia Beach Arts Center at 1711 Arctic Avenue. Works selected by Robert Maki, whose sculptures are part of communities on both coasts, will be eligible for placement in a number of sites in Virginia Beach. It is estimated that more than 3 million people will view the works during the six months they are in place; purchases will be encouraged.

Three slides of an existing work or a maquette may be submitted for each piece; three pieces from any one sculptor may be considered.

The deadline for receipt of entries in January 15, 1980. Sculptors from all over the United States may enter the competition, which is sponsored by the Committee for Public Art and is funded in part by the Virginia Arts Commission, the National Endowment for the Arts and the Virginia Beach Arts and Humanities Commission.

Soprano opens VWC Visiting Artist Series

Beverly Hoch, a coloratura soprano who won the 1979 Young Concert Artists International Auditions, will inaugurate the Doughtery Visiting Artist Series at Virginia Wesleyan College this year.

Miss Hoch will appear in a public concert on Thursday, November 29, at 8:15 p.m. in the college's Science Auditorium. The concert is free and open to the public, but reservations should be made by calling the college switchboard at 461-3232.

In addition to winning the 1979 Young Concert Artists International Auditions, Miss Hoch was the 1979 New York State National Federation of Music Clubs Award Regional Winner. In 1977 she was a Regional Winner of the Metropolitan Opera Auditions and won the Sterling International Competition. In 1976 she was named West Central Singer of the Year.

Miss Hoch, who earned her bachelor of music degree from Oklahoma City University and her master of music degree from Wichita State University, performed many operatic roles at both universities. She recently debuted with the Sarah Lawrence Opera Company as Zerlina in Mozart's "Don Giovanni." This past summer she appeared as a soloist in the Santa Fe Music Festival.

In addition to opera roles, Miss Hoch has performed as soloist with the Austin, Oklahoma, Wichita, and Lawrence (Kansas) symphonies. She participated in opera and choral programs of the Aspen Music Festival on scholarship in 1977 and 1978. Miss Hoch was a featured singer with John Biggs Renaissance Consort in nationwide tours, also playing the recorder, krummhorn and portative organ on these tours.

As part of her two days at Virginia Wesleyan, the soprano will give informal concerts and lectures before classes and will present a formal recital for students, faculty and staff.

Miss Hoch's concerts at Virginia Wesleyan are funded by the Hugh L. Doughtery, Sr. Visiting Artist Endowment. She is traveling under the auspices of Young Concert Artists, Inc. and will be accompanied by Margo Garrett, pianist.

Planetarium program

Christmas customs, stars explored in 'Winter Holidays'

The Virginia Beach City Public Schools Planetarium public program for December will be The Winter Holidays. The program is designed to appeal to the entire family, regardless of religious preference. It reviews the history of several customs of various cultures, and includes short stories for children. The star field for that time is explained, and astronomers' conclusions about the Star of Bethlehem are expressed. Each person may draw his own conclusions as to the Star of Bethlehem story.

Planetarium hours are Sunday, 7 to 8 p.m., Dec. 2, 9, and 16; Tuesday, 7 to 8 p.m., Dec. 4, 11, and 18.

No programs will be given on Sunday, Dec. 23 and 30, and Tuesday, Dec. 25 and January 1.

The planetarium is easily accessible from the 44 toll road by taking the Lynnhaven Exit (Exit 5) to the Lynnhaven Parkway and turning right at the first street - South Lynnhaven Road - to Plaza Junior High School, where the planetarium is located. Telephone the main office at Plaza Junior High School, 466-1971 for reservations. Admission is free.

An old fashioned Christmas — at 'The Hermitage'

By LILLIAN YOUELL

Special to the Virginia Beach Sun

Christmas will come early this year to Virginia Beach Colonial home where the Throughgood Garden Club presents its 11th Holiday House at

The Hermitage, 4200 Hermitage Road. According to the general chairman Mrs. G.F. McGrady, the event will take place on Saturday and Sunday, December 1 and 2, from noon until 5 p.m., with a $1 donation at the door. Nestled in the heart of the Throughgood area, surrounded by cedars and black walnut trees, is the home which was once occupied by Adam Throughgood's grandson. The present owners, Commander and Mrs. Michael E. Wasteneys, have opened their home for this tour into history.

The Hermitage was built in three stages. The oldest part dates from the early 1700's and contains the living room, dining room and one upstairs bedroom. The upper and lower center halls, the library, two bedrooms and a cellar were added in 1834. The last addition was made in 1940 when the butler's pantry, kitchen, maid's room, three baths and a bedroom were completed.

Some of the items of special interest in the house are the vintage brass lock on the front door, the hand-blown window panes, the stair rail made of dogwood and the two oldest fireplaces with mantels said to have been carved with a penknife.

In addition to the charm of the house itself, visitors will enjoy seeing the Wasteneys' beautiful furnishings. Some of their antiques are French and were acquired from Maximilian's estate by Mrs. Wasteneys' mother when the family lived in Mexico. Many handmade items will also be displayed throughout the house. The quilt to be used on the bed in the master bedroom was made in 1857 and later won the first prize blue ribbon at the Virginia State Fair in 1925. The handmade infant's cradle in the child's bedroom dates from 1800.

The Throughgood Garden Club has chosen as its theme "An Old Fashioned Christmas". As always, they will use natural materials in their holiday garlands and arrangements. The club will make ample use of many varieties of greenery in the area such as cedar, holly, pine, ivy, spruce, boxwood, magnolia, and aucuba — sometimes called the "gold dust plant".

As used by the early settlers of America, they will utilize fruits such as apples, lemons, oranges, and pomegranates. In addition, they will also use berries, cones, nuts and pods.

A unique touch this year will be the use of sprays from the "popcorn tree" (Sapium sebiferum), which was introduced into the Charleston, South Carolina, area years ago and has now become naturalized. The fruit of this tree resembles popcorn and is used in many historic homes throughout the South during the Yule-tide season.

The author of the booklet "Christmas Ideas from Williamsburg", Edna S. Pennell, explains the enjoyment of using natural materials in Christmas decorations when she writes, "Plants can represent

Walls needn't be wallflowers

By BARBARA HARTUNG

Q. We've just bought a very old three-unit flat in Virginia Beach and are fixing up an apartment for ourselves and will rent the other two units.

We like contemporary furnishings and are slowly working on decorating our unit.

We were planning to paint but the walls are badly damaged and we are patching them. However, they look scarred so I was thinking about wallpaper, but I don't want hearts and flowers and that sort of thing.

I want something practical yet attractive. What about grass cloth? — B.V.C.

A. Wall-covering would probably be a very good solution to your problem. And today there are many exquisite wall coverings with the look of damask, tweed, jute, homespun, linen and even carpet.

All of these are without traditional patterns and simply give the wall an interesting texture and excellent background for accessories and art work. Many of these are created in vinyl and often their colorings are fairly muted in the natural tones.

Vinyl is, of course, the most practical — much longer lasting than grass cloth, which, while elegant, shows its wear especially around light switches or places where people or furniture touch the wall.

Do consult a good wallcovering installer or representative to determine how you should treat your walls if they are badly cracked. You may find you'll need to apply a covering to the wall before actually attaching the vinyl covering.

Q. I am 18 years old and want to do over my bedroom. I bought a black and white fur fabric bedspread. Can you suggest something I can do for draperies? Also I need a plan. — G.A.

A. To begin your plan, decide how you want to live in your bedroom. Is it to be for sleeping as well as lounging and living or just for sleeping? That, of course, will force you to plan your bed either for sitting and sleeping or just sleeping.

Then, do you need storage and a place to read or study? If so, arrange where and what you'll need for these requirements.

After you've planned that, you should consider the color scheme which would include your new bedspread. Black and white makes a great color scheme started and often enhanced when one other bright color is added — Kelly green or tomato red are often good looking.

Use whichever bright color you choose for the carpeting and also for the draperies. Pipe the draperies in black and white braid at the edges.

If you are already committed to a neutral carpeting in your room you can always top the carpeting with a bright splotch of green or red area rug. White walls would probably be simplest.

Decor score

Q. I have a very dull-looking living room.

My walls are white and my sofa is beige. My carpeting is medium brown and beige.

I have just purchased a darling Victorian love seat which I want to reupholster. Also I need some additional chairs but my budget doesn't allow much.

What would you suggest to brighten up the room? I also need some new draperies. — L.W.N.

A. Why don't you put a tiny red and white print on the love seat. This will be lively and give you a chance to repeat the red throughout the room.

Solid red draperies would be fun with beige and white corded tie-backs.

Add a pair of basket chairs and make cushions for them either in the red and white fabric of the love seat or the red of the draperies.

Unexpectedly gay and charming prints on Victorian furniture relieves the heaviness of the design and give a fresh, contemporary look without sacrificing the charm of Victoriana.

Please send questions for Decor Score to the Virginia Beach Sun.

Fabric-backed vinyl wall covering provides the look of Berber wool in a variety of natural shades to give any wall — old or new — personality and an interesting texture and provides an excellent background for accessories and art work.

THE HERMITAGE

(from page 5) a living tie with the people of past generations. Our forbearers enjoyed the natural beauty of their surroundings, and in much the same way as we do today, gathered this beauty into their way of life in the woods, and fields, in the garden and in the home. We often wish to turn back to those simpler times."

The Thoroughgood Club's decorations will provide ideas for all to use to enrich their own celebration. The doorway and exterior will be done in the traditional Williamsburg manner with a formal arrangement of fruit and greenery over the door, including the pine-apple symbol of welcome. On entering the house, one will see the Christmas tree in the central hall. It will be decorated with handmade ornaments in white, gold and cranberry. There will be small white angels, white crocheted wreaths, egg shells decorated with velvet ribbon, chains of fresh cranberries and a gold crown on the top of the tree — a reminder that the house is situated on land that was a part of the Royal Grant to Adam Thoroughgood.

There are five fireplaces in the Hermitage and each will be decorated in a different way.

The young girl's room will feature a doll tree and a doll house. The collect-tion of small dolls belongs to member Jane Garritt. The dolls are about 25 years old and include several varieties of dolls such as the Story Book Dolls like Bo-Peep and Miss Muffet, Mme Alexander's Little Women Dolls, Holly Hobby Dolls, and the Joan Walsh Anglund Dolls with the puffy cheeks and beady eyes, each representing a character from the England books. Lace and velvet ribbons will provide the garland for this tree.

The dining room will be set for an afternoon tea with the traditional Wassail bowl on the sideboard.

The Bazaar Boutique is under the direction of Mrs. William F. Spain and will offer handmade articles and decorations. The Sweet Shop will feature homemade delicacies and is under the joint chairmanship of Mrs. T. W. Gray and Mrs. W. H. Harrison.

Quick action needed to avert housing dip

By LIN J. COOPER
Director of Communications - National Builders Association

Iran may have seized the headlines in the last few weeks, but the news that still concerns most Americans is the grim story on inflation/recession.

Virginia Beach, even with its stable economy, may not be immune to the social, economic, and political consequences of the Federal Reserve Board's latest dabbling in the money situation — action which has led to a 15.3 percent prime interest rate and 13 and 14 percent mortgage interest rates.

The gasoline crisis two years ago created a real stir in the tourism industry with a subsequent overflow of concern in other sectors of the economy. The FED's action should have the same sort of effect in the homebuilding/real estate industry with the same unfortunate overflow effect.

If the current high interest rates and tight money are allowed to continue, it's predicted that the decline in the Beach's economy may result in 1980:

- A loss of some 2000 housing unit sales. This would mean a shortage in housing for new and present Beach residents — a certain stimulant for a sharp jump in new home prices once the monetary situation is eased.
- Some 3000 jobs will be lost or jeopardized.
- Approximately $50 million may be lost in wages with a resultant $12 million forfeited in total tax revenue, not including state and local taxes collected at closings or permit fees.
- Two hundred million dollars will be lost in local economic activity, activity which spreads beyond the construction industry to other segments of the economy.

The decline could be substantial enough to be felt by a majority of Beach residents.

Apartment modes

Most Virginia Beach apartment dwellers look for furnishings that are stylish yet function well for them in their limited living space.

Modular furniture can provide flexibility and storage while still giving an apartment style. With components like corner chairs, armless chairs, ottomans and chaises, the combinations are virtually unlimited.

By using modular furniture, you can make your furnishings adapt to different floor plans when you change apartments or you can just change the arrangement for variety's sake.

With more Beach people living in apartments and condominiums, manufacturers have arisen to the challenge of offering modular designs.

They have come up with innovative shapes and styles that make this furniture work well with many different styles from traditional to ultra-contemporary.

The new styling of modular pieces also allows the separate components to stand on their own.

This means that you can break up the grouping using different pieces in different rooms of your apartment.

If you find that the chaise that was part of your living room grouping in the old apartment doesn't work in the new, move it into the den or master bedroom. More and more, the chaise is being used in tandem with the sofa rather than a loveseat.

Lawn & garden

Dry air is bad news for ferns

By PATRICK DENTON

For a dashing splash of greenery in any room, ferns and palms are popular in choices in Virginia Beach in the indoor garden. The two require quite different growing conditions, however, palms being considerably more tolerant of dry conditions and even neglect.

Ferns grow naturally in humid climates, in light shade. So when they are brought into our homes as houseplants the more closely we can duplicate their naturalized conditions, the better they will do for us. They will need light shade, high humidity and cool soil which contains lots of well-decomposed leaf mold and other organic matter.

When a fern finds itself in a spot with dry air it usually begins to turn brown and eventually it will drop its fronds. If you live in a dry area and have a passion for ferns, look for ways to supply humidity to them. You can mist the plants each day, and stand their pots in containers with wet pebbles.

Last year I invested in a cool spray humidifier, just a small one, ostensibly for the children's summer colds. I set it by my humidity-loving plants each day and turned it on. They loved it and rewarded me with lots of fresh green growth and lush looks.

Ferns have to be kept out of the direct sun. A north window in a bright house is about right. Cool temperatures and a feeding every two except in winter are needed. Peat as well as soil and sand should make up the soil for ferns. They should be repotted each spring when the pot is filled with a mass of roots.

Boston fern is the easiest of all ferns to grow, as it will withstand moderately dry conditions for a short length of time before it begins to get upset. Its long, arching fronds falling in cascades are attractive. Even more exotic is the variety "Fluffy Ruffles" with its ruffled fronds.

On the other end of the scale of difficulty is the Maidenhair fern, loveliest of all ferns with its hundreds of tiny, lacy fronds cascading around its container. But its tiny, fragile foliage needs absolutely constant humidity, without which it will quickly wither.

Easier to grow and wonderfully showy is the Birds' Nest Fern. Its waved and ruffled fronds grow from a central crown, creating a birds' nest effect. Its large wavy leaves are very eye-catching, making this fern a center of interest in any room.

Another very glossy and showy type of fern is the Holly fern, whose leaflets are shaped like holly leaves. Its tougher, glossy foliage makes it more tolerant of drier conditions than its more fragile relatives. Holly fern makes a very nice table centerpiece, especially at Christmas.

One of these more fragile types is the unusual Rabbit's Foot fern. Its roots, which grow above the soil, are silky and resemble rabbit paws. It, like the Maidenhair fern, needs constant humidity.

Not a real fern, but worthy of consideration if you shrub may be damaged by winter injury.

Very light pruning may be done to remove a few long, objectionable branches. This light corrective pruning of evergreen shrubs may be done during the holiday season when the cut stems may be used for decorations in the home.

Renew the mulch around your shrubs and roses to conserve soil moisture. This will also help control weed growth next summer. A 2 inch layer is about the right amount. Good mulch materials include fresh sawdust, fresh shredded bark or wood chips, peat moss, or pine needles.

It's also a good time to fertilize shrubs. If your bushes are one poor soil and have short thin shoots, and if the leaves were yellow or lighter green than normal this summer, they will benefit from additional nutrients.

About one month after the first fall frost, apply one cupful of a 5-10-5 fertilizer for each medium size shrub. Apply about half as much on small shrubs and twice as much on large shrubs. Spread the fertilizer evenly over the root zone from the stem to about a foot beyond the ends of the branches.

Do not fertilize shrubs which are already making good green growth. This would cause excessive vigor with dark green leaves and long shoots. Such growth is undesirable because the plants are more susceptible to injury by cold in winter. Also, such shrubs may become too large for their location and need to be replaced sooner than those which grow at a slower rate.

Wind and sun may cause serious water loss from plants in exposed locations. This is particularly true with evergreen shrubs. Such plants may be protected by wrapping with burlap, or by constructing a fence of burlap or woven reeds around them. If wrapping or a completely encircling fence of burlap or woven reeds around them. If wrapping or a completely encircling fence is impractical, a protective barrier on the windward and sunny side will be helpful. Unfortunately, such procedures are not attractive features in the landscape.

Evergreens of doubtful hardiness may be sprayed with one of the anti-wilt materials such as Wilt-Pruf or Oli-Gard. This forms a waterproof plastic film on the leaves or needles

Hot spell

The longest recorded hot spell occurred in Marble Bar, W. Australia where for 162 consecutive days it was at least 100 degrees F or higher.

Backyard gardener

cannot provide growing conditions that suit real ferns, as the asparagus fern, which puts on a nice show given just reasonable amounts of water.

Apart from the most common Sprenger variety, asparagus fern comes in other forms. One is the stiff, upright form called Plume asparagus. The delicate, feathery Asparagus plumosus is often found in florists' bouquets. Ming fern is erect and shrubby with fluffy tufts of leaves.

Most ferns can be multiplied simply by dividing root clumps and repotting the divisions. This occurs naturally anyway, as most ferns need repotting once a year. Dividing the plant is an alternative to repotting the whole thing in a larger pot.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC OF VIRGINIA STATE CORPORATION COMMISSION'S INVESTIGATION TO DETERMINE TARIFFS FOR RECOVERY OF FUEL COSTS BY VIRGINIA ELECTRIC AND POWER COMPANY

The Virginia State Corporation Commission ("Commission"), pursuant to §56-249.6 of the Code of Virginia, has required each privately-owned electric utility in Virginia to submit its estimate of fuel costs, including the fuel component of purchased power, for the one-year period beginning January 1, 1980 along with any over or under recovery of fuel costs for the preceding year.

On or before November 20, 1979, Vepco ("Company") will file with the Commission its estimated fuel costs, tariff revisions to recover such estimated fuel costs and evidence in support thereof. On and after November 20, 1979, copies of the testimony and tariffs may be reviewed during regular business hours in any Company office where bills may be paid, or in the Office of the Clerk of the Commission, 12th Floor, Blanton Building, Bank and Governor Streets, Richmond, Virginia.

A public hearing has been scheduled at 10:00 a.m., December 13, 1979, in the Commission's 13th Floor Courtroom, Blanton Building, Bank and Governor Streets, Richmond, Virginia.

NOTICE OF HEARING ON VEPCO'S PROPOSAL TO ADJUST ITS RATES WHEN NORTH ANNA UNIT NO. 2 COMMENCES COMMERCIAL OPERATION

At the conclusion of the hearing on Virginia Electric and Power Company's fuel costs for 1980 a hearing will then begin on Vepco's proposal to adjust its rates when North Anna Unit No. 2 commences commercial operation.

Vepco has filed an application, together with the proposed testimony of witnesses it expects to present, to increase its rates when its second unit at its North Anna generating plant begins commercial operation. The proposed change in rates is designed to produce additional annual revenue of approximately $46.0 million and would not become effective until North Anna Unit No. 2 commences commercial operation. Vepco projects, however, that upon the commercial operation of North Anna Unit No. 2, fuel expenses will be reduced by approximately $64.1 million.

Vepco's application, proposed tariff change, and supporting testimony and exhibits may be reviewed in any company office where customer bills may be paid.

Winter Spectrum courses announced at TCC

By RICHARD E. HOEHLIN

Director of Continuing Education, Tidewater Community College, Virginia Beach

We have just completed the brochure announcing the non-credit courses offered by the Virginia Beach campus of Tidewater Community College.

The classes are offered by our Spectrum/Community Education Program, which is a part of our community education program. We design these short courses and training to meet the needs of the community and they are supported entirely by fees paid by the participants.

Courses range from dance and exercise classes to a class in Federal and Virginia Income Tax Preparation. They vary in length of time from four to ten weeks and in price, from $10 to $35. Many are held at our Camp Pendleton Center off Birdneck Rd.

The dance classes include many dancing experiences. Participants can take creative dance, classic ballroom dancing or disco. They can even take a Mom and Tot Exercise class. Geared for mothers and their children, ages 3-7, the class covers creative dance, play and relaxation experiences. Dance classes are available on both Tuesday and Friday evenings.

For the artistic citizen, we are offering beginning oil painting on Tuesday afternoons. Participants can learn the fundamentals of the American folk craft of painting designs on tin. Artistic individuals also may be interested in beginning folk guitar or interior decorating on Wednesday evenings or in flower arranging on Thursday evenings.

The mathematically-inclined may wish to enhance his abilities in our Thursday evening Federal and Virginia Income Tax Preparation class or our Monday evening Investments and Tax Shelters.

Citizens who are active club members may find the course in Parliamentary Law on Thursday evenings helpful. Participants will learn how to conduct a meeting, how to take minutes and how to draw up a treasurer's report. They also will learn the history and principles of parliamentary law.

Persons working in the pest control field will have a special course available to them this winter also. A course in Mosquito Control will provide an overview of techniques of mosquito control and the control of other pests such as flies, fleas, ticks and roaches. Rowland E. Dorer, who has worked in the field for over 50 years, 25 of them for the Virginia State Health Department, will be the instructor.

Over the years, we have found that industry and business are interested in the continuing education activity of their employees. Continuing Education Units are recognized as an indication of an employee's interest in self improvement and community service. Therefore, for every 10 hours of participation in one of our continuing education programs, we award a C.E.U. We also maintain a permanent record of students enrolling in our continuing Education programs and the number of units they accumulate.

Persons interested in our Spectrum courses can request a registration form and schedule through the mail by calling the Office of Continuing Education at 427-3070. Those wishing to register in person can do so Monday through Thursday from 8:30 a.m. - 5 p.m. at Camp Pendleton, 980 S. Birdneck Rd., or at the main campus of Princess Anne Rd.

Registration for the non-credit Spectrum courses is running concurrently with registration for our regular credit classes in the winter quarter. Information on the winter quarter is available from the Office of Admissions and Records at the same number.

director (Rawls), to conduct the analysis of all potential museum sites and to develop a public information program which has been presented to community groups, look into funding assistance.

Hambury said that Rawls will make his slide presentation to civic organizations throughout the city.

The museum report estimates that the museum will be visited annually by 200,000 to 350,000 persons.

Construction is expected to start in 1981 with the tentative opening set for May of 1983.

Three Beach schools selected as P.E. demonstration schools

Three Virginia Beach elementary schools have been selected as health and physical education demonstration schools for Virginia during the 1979-80 school year.

The three, Kemp Landing, B.F. Williams and court House, were judged by representatives of the state department of education to have outstanding health and physical education programs. At demonstration schools, the three will be open to parents, teachers, and administrators from across the country for observation of the program in action.

According to Del L. Moser, state supervisor of health and physical education, the three schools will be recognized by the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports and will receive a special pennant from the council.

After qualifying earlier this fall, the three schools will hold the demonstration school status for three years and then will be placed on the "honor roll" for another three years. Last year, only eight Virginia schools were designated demonstration centers.

Since the program began in 1969, six Virginia Beach schools have been involved as demonstration centers... Plaza Junior High, W.T. Cooke and Alanton elementary in 1970-71; Charles Kelton, then principal of Windsor Woods Elementary and now principal of Court House Elementary.

The principals of two of the three schools selected this year were principals of schools selected in the past - George Chandler at Kemp Landing and Charles Kelton, then principal of Windsor Woods Elementary and now principal of Court House Elementary.

In notifying Williams Intermediate School of its selection, Moser told principal Robert E. Edwards that being a demonstration school is a local, state and national honor, of which its students and faculty can be very proud.

Stephen Chipok, supervisor of elementary health, physical education and safety in Virginia Beach Public Schools, said, "The three schools selected have excellent P.E. programs and truly deserve the honor. At the same time, I feel all of our schools can qualify as a demonstration center."

Fashion merchandising students begin in-service project

Fashion merchandising students of the Distributive Education department in the seven Virginia Beach schools have taken on a cooperative in-service project for this school year.

During each six-weeks period, teachers and students from one of the high schools are sponsoring what is being called an "in-service experience" for the fashion merchandising classes of all the high schools. The topic will be coordinated with subjects being covered in the classroom.

During this grading period, the students and teachers of Bayside and First Colonial high schools are hosting the in-service. The students will be guests of the Chrysler Museum in Norfolk on Tuesday, November 27, at 2:30 p.m.

The museum will provide a speaker for the group, as well as a slide presentation on periods of historic costume. A tour of the museum will follow.

Beach, blind & boatThanksgiving holidays offer feast for Beach hunters, fishermen

By ED LEWIS

Virginia Beach Sun Outdoors Writer

Thanksgiving for most people usually spells several days off with nothing to do but relax, eat turkey and watch their favorite football team on T.V.

However, that is not the case with the outdoorsman.

They are usually out hunting their favorite game and swapping tales with old hunting buddies, some of which haven't been seen since last season.

This tradition takes place year after year with little variation in the events or the places they occur in.

Holiday hunting

My Thanksgiving holiday generally starts off with a equipment burdened trip to the Eastern Shore where Bill Borum and I share a cabin we built about eight years ago.

The cabin is located in the marsh on the edge of Tangier Sound, near Onancock, Va. Tangier Sound is probably one of the best waterfowling areas in the country and with have proved this season after season.

Our blinds are located about ten minutes from the cabin which makes it the ideal set up for a duck hunt.

I know this really sounds like the kind of holiday a waterfowler couldn't pass up but I did and the results were worth the change in tradition.

This year due to the unusually warm weather I went up to Accomac Co. were Bill Borum and I had decided to do a little squirrel hunting to start the holiday off and the conditions were perfect.

Thanksgiving morning there wasn't a breath of air moving and Bill and I were almost grateful that we hadn't gone duck hunting.

Ducks don't fly much on bluebird days and this was definitely going to be one. However, the early morning stillness made the squirrels easy prey and Bill and I were back out of the woods within two hours with all the squirrels we wanted.

We spent the remainder of the day making some new decoy weights and gorging ourselves on Thanksgiving dinner. We had domestic duck for dinner and the combination of the duck and working on the decoy weights got the best of us so we made plans for an early morning trip to Chincoteague Island where Bill had duck blind.

To the blind

On Friday morning we got an early start and met another hunter, Ricky Howard, on the north end of the island where we would depart for the blind.

Ricky, was born and reared on Chincoteague and knows all aspects of waterfowling and also the ways of making a living on the water as you will later learn.

We were in the blind at sun rise and the view we had was enough to stir any body's blood. Chincoteague Bay is noted for the large number of waterfowl that winter there, especially brant, and for as far as you could see flocks of brant were moving from their nesting place to the feeding grounds.

There were thousands of them and there goose like appearance would start your leg to shaking as they neared your decoys and set their wings to stool.

In the early morning light they had to be right on you before you could be sure that they weren't Canadian geese and on two occasions we mistook two small flocks of geese for brant and failed to shoot until it was too late.

As the sun got higher in the sky, there was no doubt in our mind that this was going to be another bluebird day.

The sun heat started the mosquitoes to moving and between them and having to shed some of our clothing because of the rising temperatures, the trance we had been in earlier was gone.

We did manage to down three Canadians before calling it quits.

Rick, who is a waterman by trade, is use to making the best of weather conditions and tides so he suggested that we go gill netting for trout.

We hurried back to port, dropped off the decoys and picked up several hundred yards of gill net and headed for the beach behind Assateague Island.

We set the net several hundred yards off the beach and them made plans to return to the morning.

beach and them made plans to return to the morning.

Back to the nets

On Saturday morning, we arrived back at the nets to find some had fished them prior to us getting there, but Rick was not to be out done.

He remembered a place where he had caught fish a previous year and we headed for it. I had done some gill netting before, but the method Rick was to use was new to me and I had my doubts.

We ran up a small channel in the marsh just behind Wallops Island Beach until we found the spot Rick was looking for.

The channel was about forty yards wide and normally the tide would be running to strong in a place like this to consider doing anything much less sitting a net, but Rick had planned it for slack tide.

As the sun got higher in the sky, there was no doubt in our mind that this was going to be another bluebird day.

All I could think about was a hot shower and a cold beer so we started heading in. Rick however had other things on his mind.

I couldn't believe it, as we were passing an oyster rock Rick killed the motor and drifted up to it.

He got out a couple of wire baskets and three clam picks and off we went. We signed clams until it got dark on us and had to quit. We caught about 300 in that short period of time and then headed for home.

Grey trout galore

I couldn't believe my eyes. In that short period of time we caught over three hundred pounds of grey trout. I figures that this would be our daily.

catch, but not Rick. He knew of another place we could make one more set and off we went.

We headed for the Cockle Creek Bridge which is one of the bridges on the causeway going from the mainland over to Chincoteague Island.

We set the net fast and then headed for the marsh. The tide had already started to fall so we knew we didn't have much time before we would have to haul it back in.

While we were waiting for the net to do its job, Rick suggested we try and pick up a few oysters. He was no doubt use to taking every advantage of the day he could.

In about thirty minutes we had picked up several bushels of oysters and had to quit to fish the nets.

It was fantastic, this time we had over nine hundred pounds and this filled the fish box to the top. I was beat, and half starved.

It was a good thing because I don't know where we could have put anything else if we had caught it, and besides that I was whipped.

Hunting deer

On the local scene deer hunters are still having a fantastic year. Charley Richardson of the US 17 Hunt Club in Chesapeake told me that to date his club has killed 101 deer, fifteen of these were killed the week of Thanksgiving.

Charley told me that three of the deer killed over Thanksgiving had real nice racks. Carlos Berry of Portsmouth bagged a six pointer, Kirk Curling of Chesapeake killed a four pointer and Ronnie Williams of Chesapeake killed a four pointer.

Charley reminded me that this Friday is the last day of deer season in this area but that it has just started out in the western part of the state.

Danny McCoy and Marcy Williams both of Chesapeake went out to the mountains for opening day of deer season, but they haven't returned yet. I am really anxious to hear about their trip.

On the local fresh water fishing scene things are looking pretty good. Ois Nelson down at the Northwest River Campground in Chesapeake told me that anglers have had one of the best weeks of the season.

On Saturday Randy Adams of Chesapeake caught eight bass, the largest weight 4 1/2 lbs. Randy was using a dove horse lure. On Sunday Mike Nye and Bill Dunbar of Virginia Beach caught nine bass the largest weight in at three pounds.

On Wednesday Junior Grey of Chesapeake caught nine bass the largest weight in at three pounds.

On Wednesday Junior Grey of Chesapeake caught 25 crappie and returned on Sunday with M. Brown of Chesapeake and caught over fifty crappie. Junior was using small shiners for bait on both trips.

On Monday Jay Lancaster caught 10 crappie and Slim Mizell caught 11. "The River Rat" Rowland Marshall, and W.N. Dean of Chesapeake loaded their creels with 30 Crappie the largest weight in at 22 oz.

There are still plenty of blues in the surf at Nags Head and I hope that that will be one of my next cuttings.

Next week end Bill Borum and I are planning to make the short run from Chesapeake to the Outer Banks and see if our luck is still as good as it was on Chincoteague Bay, only this time we will be doing a little surf casting.

Sportsmen who are taking to small boats should use care in loading their passengers and gear before taking off for a hunting or fishing expedition.

The Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla 53 of Virginia Beach/Chesapeake reminds hunters and fishermen that too much weight in a boat makes it easy to swamp. Do not overload your boat with passengers and gear. Distribute passengers and gear evenly from bow to stern so that the boat rides on an even keel.

Remember to include the weight of the motor when calculating your maximum load.

Be extra careful when loading hunting and fishing equipment. Put fishhooks, lures and knives in containers. Never leave your fishing rods lying around with the lures still attached.

Never stow loaded guns in a boat. The pitching and rolling of the craft could discharge them accidentally. Put your guns and shells in separate places, preferably wrapped in waterproof material.

Fish wasted

Waste is a big factor in America's fish resources as 70 percent of all landing of ocean fish are wasted and 80 percent of all lake fish are wasted.

Jobs for young workers

Most jobs young workers require now usually require few skills, have a high turnover rate and pay low wages.

In fact, May 1976 saw 55 percent of all young men age 16-19 and 72 percent of young women age 16-19 earning less than $2.50 per hour.

Property crime offenses

Over nine million property crime offenses occurred during 1977 and two or three times as many thefts occur as are reported.

This is a staggering crime rate and as a whole, property crimes have increased 230 percent since 1960.
